Duce Defends Conduct of War; Turks Reaffirm Ties to England; British Subs Sink 8 Axis Ships

Proponents To Consider More Aid Bill Amendments

One Reported Proposal Would Name Countries To Be Benefited

The aid-to-Britain bill enters its crucial week on Capitol Hill today with a battle over amendments and a vote on final passage scheduled in the Senate before Saturday night.

With vast administrative action to start pouring war materials into the hands of the British waiting only on Senate approval of the House-passed legislation, heated debate over its provisions continued through the Sunday lull in legislative action and will be resumed on the Senate floor at noon today. Consideration of proposed amendments is set to begin Thursday.

Radio attacks on the measure were made last night by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, while passage was called for by Senators Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, and Green, of Rhode Island.

Opposes Action in Asia

Meanwhile, Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, said that he would seek to put Congress on record as opposed to dispatch of any American warships to the British naval base at Singapore.

In a statement, Tinkham said he would introduce today a resolution which also would declare that Congress was opposed to "intervention in the wars of Asia."

Tinkham said it was "being repeatedly stated publicly" that President Roosevelt was "proposing" to send warships to Singapore.

"At present Great Britain and Japan are menacing each other in Asia," the statement said. "Should any part of the United States fleet go to Singapore, such action could not fail to be regarded as a hostile and provocative act deliberately undertaken to lead the United States into war with Japan.

"Should such a war occur, it would be charged, with justice, that the United States was an aggressor."

More Amendments Possible

Whether Administration forces would accept any more amendments to the lend-lease bill was expected to be determined finally tomorrow when majority legislative leaders confer with President Roosevelt at the White House, following the President's return from Hyde Park.

Indications that the door had not been closed on all proposed changes was given yesterday by Chairman George of the Foreign Relations Committee, who told the Associated Press that majority members of his group would meet early in the week to consider "three or four"

Roosevelt Parish Gives Collection To English Church

Hyde Park, N. Y., Feb. 23.—The board of vestrymen of St. James Episcopal Church here, with President Roosevelt presiding as senior warden, today set aside this Sunday's "loose" collection for the Church of England.

The action was in conformance with that of Episcopal congregations in many American cities, seeking to raise $300,000 for the benefit of the war-harassed church abroad.

It was recalled that the British King and Queen sat in the church here with the President while on their tour of America.

Farm Wife, 42, Gives Birth To Quadruplets in 4 Hours

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ALL DOING WELL—In a Kentucky farm home with a country doctor in attendance quadruplets—three girls and a boy—were born to Mr. and Mrs. Porter Lasley of near Leitchfield. The mother, 42, is shown with the babies. She has borne 10 other children

By the Associated Press

Leitchfield, Ky., Feb. 23.—Mrs. Porter Lasley, 42-year-old farm wife, gave birth to quadruplets today over a period of four hours.

The babies—three girls and a boy weighing an aggregate of 18 pounds and ¾ of an ounce—are to be removed to a Louisville hospital. The attending physician, Dr. John C. Tucker, said the quartet all was "very good except the boy. The mother is getting along nicely."

"They're good looking children and I hope the Lord will let us keep and care for them," said the mother.

Said the astonished 44-year-old father:

"Nothing like this ever happened before. My wife's grandmother had twins once—but that's the only record of anything different. Well, I guess this means my luck is going to look up." (He is recovering from a leg fracture suffered several months ago and a daughter, Ruth, 10, recently sustained a broken arm.)

The first child—Beulah, weight 5 pounds—arrived unexpectedly at 8:30 a. m. without benefit of medical attention. Dr. Tucker did not reach the Lasley farm, 2 miles west of here, until 30 minutes later. Only Ruth was present at the time.

(Mrs. Lasley said she hadn't expected the event until April.)

At 10:30, Mildred, weight 4 pounds, was born. Then came John, weight 5 pounds ¾ ounce, at 12:15 p. m., and 15 minutes later the fourth child, Martine, weight 4 pounds, made her appearance.

The boy was named for the doctor.

Four Children Make A Family in Germany

Billions More For Army Due To Be Asked

Congress Expected To Get Roosevelt's Request This Week

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt is expected to send Congress this week, perhaps today, a request for new billions for the Army.

Congress members concerned with military affairs said that the Budget Bureau still was studying many items and that they did not know what total would be asked. Conjecture in these quarters ranged, however, from $2,000,000,000 to $4,600,000,000.

Informed sources said about $1,000,000,000 would be requested to finance construction of 3,600 bombing planes annually, to be assembled at four new plants from parts fabricated by automobile factories. Another $1,600,000,000, one informant said, would be sought for ordnance of all kinds, including large numbers of aircraft guns.

Plant Expansion Program

A major item in the request, it was understood, would be for additional defense plant expansion of all kinds. Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky, of the House Military Committee, mentioned $750,000,000 as the amount he heard would be asked for that purpose. Other legislators said it might be even larger.

House leaders said action was expected this week on a defense appropriation bill totaling more than $1,500,000,000 and including funds for development of naval lookout posts at Guam and Samoa, Pacific islands.

The Appropriations Committee is scheduled to pass formally upon the measure Wednesday and send

Labor Shortage For Defense Program Seen

Unemployed Now Put at 4,000,000; Consumers Warned

Declaring "the number of idle workers in the labor market available for employment in the near future is probably not far from 4,000,000," the Twentieth Century Fund last night pictured labor shortages in the national defense effort as certain.

Added to this was a warning, issued by the Foreign Policy Association, that American consumers must be prepared for an "increasing measure of sacrifices" in satisfying their daily wants, because of war production.

And providing background for the two glimpses into the immediate future of the Nation, an official report showed that American industrial expansion, with its peak still far off, already had attained in 1940 an output that set a new high record in the country's history, 11 per cent above the 1929 "high water mark."

Previously, the Twentieth Century Fund, on the basis of the original $16,000,000,000 defense program, had

District traffic took its sixteenth life of the year yesterday while a Chevy Chase, Md., woman and a Fort Belvoir, Va., worker were killed in automobile accidents elsewhere and 14 persons were injured in and near Washington.

Mrs. Nannie Gutridge, 65, of 1526 Potomac Avenue Southeast, died last night in Casualty Hospital of injuries received earlier in the day when the car in which she was riding collided with a trailer-truck at Third and D Streets Southwest.

Her husband, William R. Gutridge, 71, driver of the automobile, suffered minor injuries in the crash. Police listed H. Eugene Baber, 32, of Reidsville, N. C., as driver of the truck.

The Gutridges were en route to church when their car was struck, police said, by the truck. Both were thrown from the vehicle.

The mother of two children, Mrs. Bernice Laden, 35, of 4707 Bayard Boulevard, Chevy Chase, Md., was killed and her husband, Edgar R. Laden, 36, an ordnance engineer of the War Department, was critically injured when their automobile plunged over a 50-foot embankment on the Pennsylvania Turnpike near Somerset, Pa.

Mrs. Laden was dead when help reached the wrecked car. Both of the Laden children, Thomas Ray, 6, and Diann, 1, were uninjured. A Pennsylvania policeman said rescuers told him Diann was found in a snowdrift 15 feet from the car.

Supply Vessels Torpedoed in Mediterranean, Others Shelled

by James MacDonald
Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 23.—Eight enemy supply ships, totaling more than 35,000 tons, have been sunk in the Mediterranean by British submarines in recent weeks, the admiralty revealed here today.

Coincidentally, the admiralty announced that German planes have made two unsuccessful attempts to bomb the British hospital ship Dorsetshire in the Mediterranean, despite the fact that the vessel had the clear markings required under international law to guarantee her immunity.

The communique, telling about the sinking of the supply ships, did not say whether they were all Italian vessels or whether some of them were German. It is known that some German merchant ships have been operating in the Mediterranean.

Others Shelled

In addition to sinking eight ships, British submarines damaged others by shell-fire. The submarines credited with this work were the Truant, Triton, Regent, Rover, Utmost and the Upholder. The Utmost and the Upholder are believed to be new vessels, their names not being listed hitherto in Jane's authoritative "Fighting Ships."

The Truant, which has come to be known as the "adventure ship" of the British navy because of her record for brilliant and daring exploits in this war, attacked an enemy convoy and torpedoed the largest ship in the group, a vessel of about 3,500 tons. Also, the Truant shelled and damaged a vessel in another attack.

The Triton (the loss of which was disclosed January 28) sank two Italian supply ships, one of which was of 8,000 tons, shortly before this submarine met its doom.

The Rover is credited with the sending of an Italian oil tanker to the bottom. The tonnage of the tanker is not given. The Regent destroyed a 2,472-ton vessel which, the admiralty said, was "almost certainly" the Citta di Messina.

Deserted by Escort

The Upholder accounted for two supply vessels, one of about 8,000 tons and the other of 5,000 tons.

The Utmost sent a torpedo creashing into an 8,000-ton ship which, according to the communique, was "deserted" by her convoy escort and which when last seen was in a sinking condition.

The admiralty did not disclose details regarding the bombing attack against the Dorsetshire which was formerly a troopship. She is of 9,600 tons.

Eden Expected In Ankara; May Seek to Form Balkan Front

By Dana Schmidt
United Press Staff Writer

Istanbul, Feb. 23.—Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu announced tonight that Turkey is prepared to back up her alliance with Great Britain and "defend herself if attacked," regardless of last week's Turkish-Bulgarian declaration of nonaggression.

It was understood that British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, now in Egypt, will arrive in Ankara by special plane Tuesday for consultations on the Anglo-Turkish Mutual Aid Pact in view of the urgency brought about by Adolf Hitler's deeper thrust into the Balkans.

Alliance Attempt Seen

The reported early arrival of Eden, who may be accompanied by Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the British imperial staff, emphasized reports that Britain was attempting an eleventh-hour creation of a Balkan defense alliance among Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia in an effort to halt the Nazis.

Saracoglu's statement, made as Turkey maintained large military forces along the frontier facing Bulgaria for the admitted possibility of a German attack, appeared in the semiofficial Ankara newspaper Ullus.

The Turkish-Bulgarian declaration, Saracoglu said, in no wise has altered Turkish foreign policy despite rumors and interpretations abroad that Turkey had thereby given Germany a free hand in the Balkans.

The statement took on special significance in view of reports that Germany is almost ready to enter Bulgaria openly, for the purpose of bringing strong pressure on Greece.

It was believed that after Eden has conferred with Turkish officials he will go to Athens.

British Attack Forecast

Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Feb. 23.—In military circles here it is believed that German troops will formally occupy Bulgaria this week and that Britain will sever relations with that country on Tuesday or Wednesday next and immediately afterward open air hostilities on the invader on Bulgarian soil, if not against the Bulgarian troops as well.

Diplomatic sources here were not prepared to confirm these dates, but agreed that if the German invasion did not take place this week it could not be postponed longer than the first or second week in March.

AP Man Tells of 2-Day Desert Trek on Banana, Bottle of Pop

John Lear, Associated Press writer, reached Lima, Peru, yesterday after a harrowing experience in the Sechura Desert. His plane was forced down last Tuesday and he was missing for five days. Lear has been in South America on assignment to do special articles. Here is one he didn't have on his schedule.

By John Lear
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chiclayo, Peru, Feb. 23.—A band of fisherman brought me back to safety today after a terrible trek for two days and three nights on foot in the Sechura Desert with only a bottle of soft drink and a banana to share among three men.

JOHN LEAR

We were so close to gone at one point that the buzzards began circling around us in the desolate sands.

With me were Hugh Wells, owner and pilot of the plane which was forced down last Tuesday in the desert, and Hermann Baumann, Peruvian government highway engineer. We had left 12 other persons at the fuelless plane in a desperate bid for help.

We made the trip with an umbrella, a compass, and a flashlight besides our little bottle of soda pop and the lone banana.

And me without a hat.

Wells set the course with the compass and the light.

Baumann carried the umbrella, which shielded us from the blaze of the tropical sun by day and served in several unsuccessful attempts to catch drinking water from the sky during the night.

I carried the bottle and the banana and was assigned the job of rationing them.

By some miracle my guess of the time required to get out of the desert proved exactly right but to make the rations fit the time it was necessary to cut the banana in tiny slices and restrict the use of the soft drink to the few drops that could be obtained by sticking one's tongue in the bottle opening and letting the liquid touch it.

We reached the Pacific Ocean—

Nazi Threw the First Bottle, Says Earle of Sofia 'Incident'

Envoy Says He Injured Major's Features in Row

By the Associated Press

Sofia, Feb. 23.—United States Minister George H. Earle said tonight that a German army major "threw a champagne bottle which just missed my head" in a cafe skirmish last night when the Nazi officer objected to the orchestra striking up his requested number—"Tipperary," a British World War marching song.

"The trouble began," Earle said at a special press conference, while exhibiting arm injuries suffered in the scuffle, "when the German cornered me in a washroom and demanded to know why I had given the orchestra ten bucks to play Tipperary.

"I told him that was my business, and that Bulgaria was a neutral country. He then followed me outside and threw a champagne bottle which just missed my head."

The incident occurred in a restaurant just around the corner from the American Legation.

Large-Scale Raids Resumed Over Britain

Spring Offensive Believed Under Way; Many Areas Bombed

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 23.—Strong squadrons of German fighters and bombers roared across Dover Strait today in what the British Press Association viewed as the start of the Nazi Luftwaffe's spring air offensive.

Most of the Germans were turned back by British Spitfire and anti-aircraft fire but the Luftwaffe persisted tonight. The raiders fanned out over Britain for widespread raids and carried out a light attack against London.

The Press Association said the appearance of the German planes "heralded the opening of the enemy's spring air offensive, foreshadowed by Saturday's patrol activities and small scale daylight raids on Southeast England."

Raiders crossed the northeast coast, dropping high explosives and incendiaries and causing some casualties and damage.

A lone raider was reported to have dropped bombs in a south-

Bulgar Police Spread Net For Anti-Nazis

Seven Peasant Party Leaders Seized In Pamphleteering

By Thomas F. Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 23.—Police halted all automobile traffic in the Sofia district early this afternoon and began a nation-wide hunt for Bulgarians spreading anti-German leaflets. These were among accumulating signs of impending Nazi military entrance into this country.

There was no explanation for the orders to clear the highways. Bulgarian military transports were reported on the move but the necessity for a police permit for even a short trip outside the Sofia city limits prevent first-hand investigation.

Reports from Hungary said German troops still were continuing the movement begun last December 27 across that country into Rumania, just across the Danube River from Bulgaria. These reports said 45 German pursuit planes were based on Hungarian airports near the railway lines, presumably to protect the movement which is reported to have maintained an average of about 40 military trains a day.

[Authoritative quarters in London said they were convinced that the main forces of Adolf Hitler's Balkan army would begin pouring into Bulgaria across the Danube this week and that it would be "not in the least surprising" if the big push began today, the United Press reported.]

The Turkish press, apparently reflecting an official viewpoint that Bulgaria already is firmly within Germany's grasp, devoted its attention to reported British plans to aid Greece when and if the Nazis

Canadian Mystery

Sir Frederick Banting, Insulin Discoverer, Missing in Plane

By the United Press

Montreal, Feb. 23.—Sir Frederick Banting, discovers of the insulin treatment for diabetes, has been missing in a military airplane off the East Coast of Canada since Friday, it was announced officially tonight.

With him in the plane were Capt. Joseph Creighton MacKie, 31, Kansas City; Navigator William Bird, whose home is in England, and William Snailham, Bedford, N. S.

Authorities said the plane was "being delivered by a civilian organization." It was flying in fair weather conditions, and as it has not arrived at its destination, and as no radio signal has been received from it since Friday morning, it is feared it may have come down in the sea off the East Coast

"An intensive and widespread search was commenced immediately and it is still in progress."

Dr. Banting's insulin discovery, one of the greatest feats of modern medicine, occured in 1922 at the University of Toronto. Although the drug has saved the lives of thousands of diabetes victims, he never received a dollar for the patent.

He and an assistant, Dr. Charles Best, killed 91 dogs by exposing them to diabetes before they discovered the secret of insulin. The ninty-second dog they experimented on recovered.

Banting sold the patent to the university for $1, which he never received. However, he won a Nobel Prize in 1923 and an annual benefice of $7,500 from the Canadian government.

By the Associated Press

Rome, Feb. 23.—Premier Mussolini, in an unheralded broadcast to the Italian people, today defended the Fascist regime's handling of the Libyan campaign, announced the arrival of German air and armored detachments in Sicily and Libya, and declared that "Italy, whatever happens, will march with Germany to the end."

He promised a new Italian offensive against the Greeks, scoffed at United States' fears of an Axis invasion of America, and assailed what he called the small minority of Italian "weepers, grumblers and snakes" left over from the Masonic lodges, "whom we will smash when and as we wish."

Italian morale, he declared, cannot be broken.

Il Duce spoke for 45 minutes to Rome Fascist leaders, who had been notified only a few hours earlier to come to the Adriano Theater. The rest of the nation heard the speech from loudspeakers in public squares.

First Speech in Months

It was Mussolini's first address to the nation since November 18, nearly a month before the British offensive opened in North Africa.

Mussolini defended his regime against the charges abroad that there had been a lask of preparation for the Libyan campaign, which, he acknowledged, cost the Italian army "one entire army—the Tenth," as well as "the Fifth Air Squadron."

For the first time he gave a sharp idea of the men and supplies sent to Libya for what the Italians had expected would be an advance on

Duce Tells Why He Thinks Britain Cannot Win

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 23.—Premier Mussolini today offered a list of reasons why he believes Britain cannot win.

They include Germany's increasing strength and armed superiority over Britain; the Axis control of the continent except for Russia; the counter blockade of Britain; the superiority of Axis morale—there could never be a moral collapse in Italy, Mussolini asserted.

The last point was that to win the war the British would have to debark on the continent and beat the Axis armies, "and this not even an Englishman, however full of alcohol and dope he may be could drea mof."

Duce Defends Conduct Of Libyan Campaign

Egypt and seizure of the Nile and Suez.

He said 14,000 officers and 396,358 solders of two army corps—the Fifth and the Tenth—including ten divisions of Italians and Libyans had made up the Italian forces. There were 1,924 cannon of all sizes, many of the most recent model, 15,386 machine guns, 11,000,000 rounds of shells, 1,344,287,275 rounds of small arm ammunition, 127,877 tons of other materials, 779 tanks, some of them heavy; 9,584 trucks, and 4,809 motorcycles.

"These figures show that an effort which may be called imposing was dedicated to the defense of Libya," Mussolini shouted. "The same thing may be said about the preparations for resistance in East Africa notwithstanding the distances and the total isolation which exalts the will and courage of our soldiers."

100,000 Taken Prisoner

"The British have claimed over 100,000 prisoners in the Libyan campaign and numerous guns, tanks and trucks).

At present, Mussolini said, Italy has about 2,000,000 men under arms, but could have 4,000,000 this year.

He explained the Italian defeat in Africa by saying the British jumped "five to ten days" before the Italians expected to start their own offensive, and offered a similar explanation for Italy's delayed entrance into the war last June 10. Italy, he declared, would have been in the war from the beginning had she been ready.

But the largest section of his address was devoted to the power of Nazi Germany. This power, he asserted, did not diminish during the winter but rather increased by "gigantic" proportions.

Germany's human losses were held to "a minimum" in proportion to the effort, and losses in material were "insignificant," he declared.

"May it be said for foreigners who are always ready for wicked slander that the behavior of German soldiers in Sicily and Libya is perfect in every way," he added.

Italy's losses in the Greek campaign, he assured his listeners, were limited to "a few thousands, mostly wounded," while the Greek losses have been "extremely high."

"Forced" Into Greek War

Italy was "forced" into the war with Greece, he said, because Greece would not renounce British guarantees.

As in Libya, he continued, men and arms have been sent to Albania "without reserve."

"Let it be said once for all," he roared, "that our soldiers in Albania have fought superbly. The Alpini especially have written pages of glory which would honor any army."

Conceding that the Italians have been having "gray days" in Africa, Mussolini said that "happens in every war."

He told his listeners that two of the battleships damaged by British aerial torpedoes in the November 11 attack on the Taranto naval base have been repaired and are virtually ready to return to service.

Speaking of German aid to Italy, he said:

"The cooperation offered by the Fuehrer of German air and armored detachments now in the Mediterranean," he said, "is only proof that all fronts are common (for the Axis) and efforts are common."

The assembled Blackshirts cheered him loudly.

Mussolini referred twice to the United States. The first time he said:

"England is alone. This isolation pushes her toward the United States from which she desperately and urgently invokes aid. The industrial power of the United States is certainly great but for it to be felt supplies must reach England safely and must be in quantities not only to compensate for the destruction wrought and to be wrought on the industrial plants of Britain, but to give superiority over Germany which is impossible because men, machines and raw materials of the entire European continent are now working with Germany."

"Colossal Mystification"

The second reference to the United States was this:

"Let me say that what is happening in the United States is one of the most colossal mystifications in the records of history. An illusion and a lie are at the base of American intervention, the illusion that the United States is still a democracy while in fact it is really a political, financial oligarchy dominated by Jewry through a form of extremely personal dictatorship.

"It is a lie that the Axis powers want to attack America after Britain. Neither in Rome nor Berlin are fantastic projects of that kind held. Such projects could only come from an insane inclination. Let Americans rest at ease and not believe that as regards them is there a big bad wolf which wishes to devour them. In any case, it is more likely that the United States would be invaded by the inhabitants of the not well-known but very bellicose planet Mars who will descend from the starry spaces upon an imaginable flying fortress than by Axis soldiers."

The words recalled to Mussolini's listeners the Orson Welles broadcast of an adaptation of H. G. Wells' "The War of the Worlds" which caused mass hysteria in October, 1938, chiefly in New Jersey. The audience roared with laughter.

"The events of these months exasperate our will and contribute and heighten our cold conscious implacable hate against the enemy—a hatred radiating in every heart diffused in every home and which is an indispensable element of victory," he said.

Italy's plan for a war on Greece was presented by the high command in Albania and was "unanimously approved without any reservations," he said.

Speaking of Germany's aid, Il Duce said the "Germans know Italy has a million soldiers on her back between the British and the Greeks, as well as 15,000 to 20,000 planes and a similar number of tanks, cannons and at least 500,000 tons of naval craft."

Mussolini said he would stick to the truth in speaking of Italian losses in Africa, and praised the Italians still fighting in East Africa.

"We have been at war since 1922 (the year of the Fascist march on Rome), since the day on which we raised against the Masonic, democratic and capitalistic world, the flag of our revolution which then was defended by a handful of men," Mussolini said.

The war, he said, would end when Britain's defeated unless, at the risk of their own independence, her dominions overseas carried on.

He declared the war on the European continent had ended with the aid of Italy whose non-belligerency in the early months of the conflict had immobilized greater forces of British and French.

The No. 1 enemy, he said, is Britain, "against whom we will fight to the last drop of blood."

Again there were wild cheers.

Speaking of Italy's entrance into the war on June 10 last, he said:

"Some think now we were too soon, who then thought we were too late."

Inflicted "Heavy Losses"

Referring to Italy's fight on various fronts, Mussolini said "in four months we inflicted heavy losses on the British on land, in the air and on the sea."

As for North Africa, he said, Italian technicians since 1935 had "worked miracles" in Libya, "one of the most delicate points."

He described the British offensive in North Africa as starting from five to ten days before the Italian plans were ready.

"The figures show we made powerful provisions for the defense of Libya," he said.

He admitted the gravity of Italy's African setbacks.

Mussolini said the Italian people should not be confused with the small minority of "weepers," grumblers and "snakes" left over from the Masonic lodges "whom he will smash when and as we wish."

"Italy, whatever happens, will march with Germany to the end," the Duce shouted. "All those who might be tempted to suppose anything else forget the Italo-German alliance is not only between the armies but between two peoples and two revolutions and will set the pace of the century."

Are Common Fronts

Without specifically linking Nazi help to the Italians on the Albanian front, Mussolini emphasized that all Axis fronts were common fronts and all forces common forces.

England, he said, was being increasingly blockaded to the point of "catastrophe."

Axis morale, he continued, was "infinitely better than English morale" because their peoples fight "with the certainty of victory" whereas, he said, Lord Halifax, now British Ambassador to the United States, said the English were fighting "because they have no other choice."

Referring to the bombardment of Genoa by British warships on February 9, Il Duce said he could understand the attack as an assualt on military objectives but as an attempt to break Italian morale it was useless and "shows that he (Prime Minister Churchill) does not know the Genoese."

This observation brought a new wave of cheers and laughter from those in the theater.

Continuing, Mussolini said Britain stands alone in throwing herself into the arms of the United States and said that with the exception of Portugal, Switzerland and Greece which exceptions will stand "for a short time," England had not a friend on the continent.

Object of Attack

Mussolini said the "world of liberalism, democracy and plutocracy" had made war on Fascist Italy since the beginning of his regime with "a press campaign, the spreading of slander, financial sabotage and attacks even when we were intent on that work of internal reconstruction which will remain for centuries an indestructible monument of our creative will."

"Have you never wondered in the hour of meditation which each of us might find in his day, have you never wondered how long we have been in the war?" he said. "Not for eight months as superficial reports of the news may lead some to believe. Not since September, 1939, when through the play of guarantees to Poland, Great Britain unleashed the conflagration with criminally premediatated will. We have been at war six years and precisely since February, 1935.

"The war in Ethiopia had hardly finished when from the other shore of the Mediterranean came the appeal of Franco (Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain), who had begun his national revolution.

"Could we Fascists leave this cry without reply and say we were indifferent before the perpetuation of the bloody ignominy of the so-called popular fronts? No!

"In reality we have been at war since 1922, namely from the day in which we raised against the Masonic, democratic and capitalistic world the flag of our revolution which then was defended by a handful of men.

"The outbreak of hostilities in September, 1939, found us at the close of two wars which had imposed relatively modest sacrifices of human life but had forced us to make financial efforts simply enormous.

"It is not the first time that has happened in the history of the Italian people. If we had been ready 100 per cent we would have entered the field in September, 1939, not in June, 1940. During this lapse of time we made ready and overcame exceptional difficulties. The lightning, smashing victory of Germany in the west eliminated the eventuality of a long continental war.

"From that time a land war on the continent was finished. It cannot be reviewed and has ended with a victory of Germany facilitated by the nonbelligerency of Italy which immobilized enormous naval, air and land forces of the French-English bloc.

"Some who today affect to think Italy's intervention was premature probably are the same who then considered it tardy. In reality the moment was opportune, because if it were true that one enemy was on the way toward liquidation there remained the other, the greater, the more powerful, the No. 1 against whom we have undertaken and will conduct a fight to the last drop of blood.

"With the armies of Great Britain on the European continent finally liquidated, the war would assume only a naval and air character and for us also a colonial one. It is in the geographic and historic order of things that for Italy were reserved theater of war more distant and difficult, war overseas and war in the desert. Our fronts extend thousands of kilometers and are a thousand kilometers away.

"Some ignorant foreign commentators should have taken account of that . . ."

leaving the washroom he returned to his table.

The orchestra still was playing "Tipperary" and he joined with others in singing it.

Hisses and booes came from other diners, and the saber-scarred German officer jumped to his feet and demanded that the song be stopped. The frightened manager complied. The orchestra swung into a German waltz.

This brought hisses and boos from those favoring "Tipperary."

Then the bottle throwing began. The barrage lifted from all corners of the restaurant.

Women shrieked and men cursed. The women dived under the tables. Others fled to the kitchen.

One bottle flying through the air struck Earle on the arm, cutting him.

Another was seen to strike the German major full on the forehead. He fell to the floor unconscious.

Ten men in heavy boots rushed across the floor toward Earle's table. A man described as a Bulgarian shoemaker and a group of male dancers intervened, as did restaurant attendants.

Finally Bulgarian army officers and a police emergency squad stormed into the restaurant, took the wounded German officer to a hospital and shooed all customers out into the dawn.

Earle said later of the bottle which cut him on the arm:

"I warded that one off and retaliated by injuring his (the thrower's) features.

"The incident was regrettable, but I saw no other course."

After his arm was dressed at the American Legation Earle told the local press:

Large-Scale Raids Resumed Over Britain

eastern district but he was chased to the sea by a night fighter plane. The bombs fell in a field.

Air raid sirens sounded twice in London after nightfall. The second alert was just before midnight. Searchlights swept the skies and antiaircraft batteries barked in some sections of the Capital.

The second all-clear sounded less than an hour after the alarm.

The air ministry, however, described the daylight activity as "slight" and said it centered chiefly in the regions of the east and southeast coasts.

"Few enemy aircraft have crossed the coast and there is no report of any bombs having been dropped," it said.

It was the second successive day of mass display of aerial might, but Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production, told Canadians in a transatlantic broadcast that Nazi warplanes have lost their terror.

Factory damage has been repaired, the minister declared, and "now it may be said that industrial plants are no longer in the same danger."

He urged the Dominion's workers to send food and weapons and exhorted them to "seek the world over for ships."

"Gather together every kind of transport which will enable us to continue defense of this island," he told them.

The weather was favorable for air attack. After a bright morning sun, low clouds hid the early afternoon raiders which droned inland on a northrly course.

An hour later, a group of 20 Messerschmitts, flying in the usual four-abreast raiding formation, roared over the mist-shrouded sea and were seen plainly through gaps in the clouds. They wheeled to the right as they approached the English shore and continued north.

Several smaller formations arrived at intervals, crossing paths with earlier, home-bound raiders.

Spitfire patrols were active over the Strait throughout the morning and British bombers also were seen flying out to sea. The air ministry announced that a small R. A. F. force had raided the naval base in the Nazi-occupied French port of Brest overnight.

Invasion Coast Battered

London (Monday), Feb. 24 (U.P.). British bombers lashed the "invasion coast" of France with hundreds of heavy explosives last night and early today.

Viewed from the English coast, the raid took on the appearance of a giant pyrotechnic display as huge flashes knifed the sky over the Boulogne and Calais areas, indicating at times that munitions dumps may have been hit by bombs.

Winging over the English Channel shortly after dusk, Britain's "night-hawk" bombers struck first at the Boulogne area, raking it with what appeared to be their heaviest bombs, then they raced up the coast and attacked Calais.

Seaport Pounded, Says Berlin

Berlin, Feb. 23 (AP).—The English seaport of Hull was pounded by German bombers last night, the high command reported today, and D. N. B., official German news agency, amplifying the report, said great fires were started along the seven miles of docks which line the Humber River, 22 miles inland from the North Sea.

The agency pointed out that these docks are well known to be the unloading point of large shipments of oil-bearing seeds.

One British Spitfire fighter was shotdown today in the course of minor air activity over Britain, D. N. B. said. German planes scouted far over England but only one engaged a British plane and there were no Nazi losses, the agency reported.

Light battle planes also attacked an airport in east England, a communique said, and destroyed a hangar and four planes on the ground yesterday, while other planes of "armed reconnaissance groups" bombed a factory in north Scotland, a troop encampment, numerous freight trains and motor columns in south England.

The communique also reported that in a long-range bomber attack on British ships northwest of Scotland last Wednesday "two additional large merchant vessels were so seriously damaged that loss may be assumed."

On the following day, the high command said, a 7,000-ton ship was sunk and two other large merchant vessels "tensively damaged."

The communique also reported these results of attacks in the Mediterranean region: Medium caliber bombs hit a small warship and a large merchant vessel and harbor facilities at Bengasi, Libya; and two airports and a troop concentration were attacked with bombs and guns in planes south of Agedabia, Libya.

It declared that 32 British planes were shot down in air battles and by antiaircraft fire between February 15 and February 22 and numerous planes destroyed on the ground. German losses in the same period were 15 planes, the communique said.

President Leads Church Aid Session

Hyde Park, N. Y., Feb. 23 (AP).—President Roosevelt and the parishioners of St. James' Episcopal Church, the only American church in which rulers of Britain have worshiped, offered their bit of financial assistance today to the Church of England.

The President, who as senior warden, holds the highest lay office in the parish, presided at a meeting of the vestry, which voted to give today's loose collection to the Church of England.

King George VI, head of the Church of England, and his Queen attended divine services at St. James' on June 11, 1939.

In the course of the morning announcements, the rector, the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, said:

"The church, as England knows it, is not now functioning. They have asked if the daughter church will come to their aid."

Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, the President's 85-year-old mother, drove to church with her son.

After a big Sunday dinner, Mr. Roosevelt devoted some time to routine business.

Mr. Roosevelt expects to be back in Washington Tuesday.

march through Bulgaria toward eastern Thrace.

The Istanbul newspaper Ikdam, with close official connections, said Britain "seems to favor a plan of attacking in the Mediterranean even before Germany does" and that it is possible, therefore, for a strong British army "soon to go to Salonika or attempt an invasion of Sicily."

Seven top leaders of the Farms' Peasant Party, including Stancho Trifanoff, former assistant police chief of Sofia, were arrested in the capital as the police began their round-up of Bulgarians issuing leaflets against Germany and calling on the peasants to resist any Nazi occupation.

The capital was ordered to be ready for a blackout at a moment's notice, beginning Tuesday.

Border regions, including the area along the Danube facing the Rumanian shore where Nazi troops are massed, were forbidden to foreigners.

Significantly, German diplomats staged a movie showing in Sofia's largest theater of the Nazi triumph on the Western front—the same type of film whose showing in Norway, Holland and Belgium preceded the entry of German troops by only a few days.

Bulgarian Premier Bogdan Philoff and many members of his cabinet attended.

Nazis Seek Foodstuffs

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 23.—The Yugoslav trade minister, Ivan Andres, conducted a series of conversations over the weekend with representatives of the German Ministry of Supply.

Unconfirmed reports said that the German ministry was leasing property at Osijek, where a supply depot will be constructed to relay shipments of foodstuffs and raw materials to Germany from Yugoslavia.

Priestley Demands Britain Publicize Invasion Defenses

London, Feb. 23 (AP).—A demand for more publicity on Britain's anti-invasion devices was made tonight by J. B. Priestly, the author, in a broadcast declaring that "it's about time we had a few articles hinting at the strange, unpleasant things we have prepared for Hitler's dejected, moon-calf louts scattered between the Arctic Sea and the Pyrenees, if they should attempt conquest of this island."

Priestly said newspaper articles presented the Nazis as "mysterious, powerful wizards conjuring up new spells of doom." This idea of Nazi power, he said, "which their propaganda has encouraged, has done them more good so far than all their dive-bombers and armored divisions."

The Nazi trick, he said, "Is to take away at least 50 per cent of your power of resistance" by propaganda and "then wade into you with everything they've got—which is never as much as they say they've got—making a terrific noise."

Somali Town Falls as British Press Advance

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Feb. 23.—British troops operating around the mouth of the Juba River have captured the town of Jumbo in Italian Somaliland together with prisoners and quantities of war material, and today continued to advance along the east bank of the river.

The supporting South African air force bombed and strafed Italian troops near Barba along the coast midway between Chisimaio and the other good port, Mogadiscio.

Free French troops have reinforced the British column which is moving southward along the Red Sea in Eritrea. This column may jeopardize Italian positions in the interior by cutting them off from communication with the coastal towns. In the meantime, the British net is tightening around Cheren. The Italians, however, are still holding out and are reported to be fighting vigorously.

The French who are fighting in Eritrea are mostly foreign legionnaires and Senegalese from Equatorial Africa.

Counterattack Fails

British and Abyssinian patriot units operating in the Kurmuk area captured Shogahi on the Blue Nile. These forces later repulsed an Italian counterattack, killing 150 of the enemy at the cost of only slight losses.

South African Air Force planes bombed an Italian camp in the Mega-Moyale area along the Kenya-Abyssinia border. Several fires were started among the forts and buildings at Burye in Abyssinia, south of Lake Tana region, where the Abyssinian patriots have been most active. Other Royal Air Force squadrons machine-gunned nearby troop positions.

In the course of various reconnaissance flights the Royal Air Force chalked up new scores yesterday, including six Caproni bombers and one Fiat fighter destroyed at Massawa in Eritrea and a Junkers and a Messerschmitt, both of which were shot down during a dog fight over Brega, south of Bengasi. One Royal Air Force fighter is reported missing from the day's operations.

Archers Fire Base

Khartoum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—An attack by crack Sudanese archers using "incendiary arrows" was reported today to have set ablaze the Italian military base of Asosa along the Blue Nile in western Ethiopia.

Asosa, which was fortified by the Italians last autumn as a base for which the Fascisti evidently hoped to invade the southern Sudan up the valley of the Blue Nile, held a full division as its garrison.

The picked bowmen, creeping up under cover of darkness, surrounded the encampment and began shooting their fire-spreading arrows which have a bar across the shaft, causing them to remain imbedded in walls and roofs of the grass huts.

Coast Guard Scans Yacht Prospects

Coast Guard officials from Norfolk district headquarters have been making inquiries in the Washington area preparatory to inducting privately owned yachts, owners and crews into the Coast Guard Reserve, it was learned yesterday.

A bill adopted by Congress last week provided for the creation of a Coast Guard military reserve to parallel the Naval Reserve. About 200 yachts will be absorbed under the entire program. Officials were unable to estimate how many of these would be in the Norfolk district.

Grand Duchess GreetsLuxembourg

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg said today she was directing her efforts toward "the restoration of the Luxembourg state as a complete natoinal sovereignty."

The ruler of the tiny country, overrun by the Nazi arms last May, spoke at a reception for natives of her country shortly after she and her husband, Prince Consort Felix, had attended solemn high mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral, at which Archbishop Francis J. Spellman presided.

EVEN before there was a telephone, there was a laboratory—that of Alexander Graham Bell in Boston, where the telephone was born. That was 64 years ago, but the telephone is still being invented.

Telephone service is what it is today because engineers have never stopped working to learn more about speech and hearing. In the Bell Telephone Laboratories hundreds of scientists engage in constant research. The results? You can talk more easily and be heard more clearly today over the telephone because of these men of science.

From these Laboratories, among a thousand and one other things, have come new types of telephones, cables no thicker than your wrist carrying 4200 wires, even the wire networks over which nation-wide broadcasts* come to you.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company—YOUR company—shares with the other twenty-three regional companies of the Bell System in the benefits of the Laboratories' research. And every telephone user benefits in the better service it makes possible.

Nazis Will Try Invasion Soon, Vichy Is Told

By G. H. Archambault.
Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Feb. 23.—Well-informed circles here expect a general German offensive against Britain before the end of this month or early in March—at any rate, before the end of the short period when tides and currents in the English Channel are more favorable than at any other time.

Private advices from Channel ports under German occupation continue to speak of intensive preparations, of construction of subterranean airfields from which planes are catapulted, of concentration of thousands of lighters and barges, of many troop movements and of manufacture in French factories of many thousands of lifebelts.

There are even rumors tonight that the "forbidden zone" established by the German army is about to be extended to include a strip about 20 miles wide along the coast from Dunkirque to Brest.

At the same time there is a growing impression that Italy is in great difficulty from the military point of view. It is not believed that any further serious resistance is likely to be offered in Libya. There are reports here that Moslem tribes in the south are fast moving north to revenge for many years of repression. At the same time the French dissident forces moving north from the desert are increasing their pressure.

There are reports of many hundred Italian settlers seeking sanctuary by crossing the border into Tunisia, which is under French protectorate. Rumor has it that some of these fleeing settlers were actually soldiers not so very many days ago.

Expert opinion here agrees that the German high command is not likely to seek to retrieve the situation in the Mediterranean Basin, at least not for the present, mainly because the Axis has not gained mastery of the seas there.

Regarding an attempted landing in Britain, these same experts say the air force alone cannot conquer Britain and that in order to bring about a victory it must be supported immediately by tanks and later by infantry.

Italo-French Deal Possible

Vichy, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—France may regain her Riviera and Alpine territories, which have been occupied by Italy since the armistice, by allowing nearly 80,000 Italian civilian colonists to flee into French Tunisia from the British conquest of Libya, it was stated reliably tonight.

The evacuation plan, in which Generalissimo Franco of Spain is acting as an intermediary, was said to be a direct outgrowth of Franco's recent conference with Benito Mussolini and Marshal Petain.

If the trade can be negotiated France may regain the territories she surrendered to Italy under the terms of last June's armistice including Mentone on the Riviera and the upper Maurienne Valley high in the Alps.

Originally, it was understood in Vichy tonight, Mussolini sought to arrange an outlet from Libya not only for his colonists but up to 125,000 Italian troops, moving them across France's northern Africa territory into Spanish Morocco.

The French government in Vichy rejected this proposal, however, because it might throw France back into the war.

It was believed in Vichy tonight that the French government will consent to receive Libyan colonists in Tunisia only on condition that they be concentrated in camps and be stripped of any political rights pending their eventual repatriation to Italy.

Vice President Helps Greeks

BUYS TICKET FROM ACTRESS—Vice President Wallace, back in Des Moines Saturday to address the National Farm Institute, purchases a Greek war relief ball ticket from Brenda Joyce, film actress, who did a full day's work for the cause. Miss Joyce made a personal appearance at the ball

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Feb. 23 (AP).—Verne Marshall, chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, said today that Vice President Wallace, in his address at Des Moines last night, was "preparing the country for the war that we will be in soon after the lend-lease bill is finally passed."

Wallace's prepared speech asserted that "the price of democracy and peace on this hemisphere is based on our being more willing than the Nazis to sacrifice our goods, our time and, if need be, our lives."

Marshall, who is on a speaking tour through the Midwest, issued a statement saying:

"To those who are abreast of the war-making activities at Washington, the Wallace speech was no surprise. . . .

The Vice President says we can preserve our Democracy only by aiding those foreign governments which double-crossed the United States at Versailles, after the last World War . . .

"Mrs. Roosevelt tells us we must be willing to sacrifice our liberties to save our democracy. All this means that the people . . . are being educated for the surrender of their Bill of Rights and the advent of national socialism."

Nazis Blamed For Food Lack, Not Blockade

Germany and not the British blockade was blamed in an official report yesterday for critical food shortages in the Nazi-conquered nations of Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France.

An Agriculture Department report said that in an effort to make up for food deficiencies at home the Germans had drained the subjugated countries of supplies which would have provided "somewhat better than minimum food requirements."

The report was prepared by Dr. Frederick Strauss, Agriculture Department economist, for study of defense officials. It is to be submitted to the White House early this week.

"Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France would actually be able," it said, "to feed their people, despite the British blockade, if Germany were not adjusting their agricultural economies to her own food needs and their industrial machinery and transport systems to her war effort.

Produce for Export

"There are those who argue that we must send food to the conquered nations because their peacetime food imports were great and these have been cut off by the blockade. But these peacetime imports were needed largely to produce food surpluses (meat, dairy products, eggs) for export."

The report asserted that the conclusion that the conquered nations could solve their food problems if left alone "is inescapable if one pieces together such information as is available from official American sources, from statements of various European government spokesmen and particularly from the scant rations known to prevail in most of these countries."

Prospects of critical shortages at home are leading Germany, the report declared, to "extract from the conquered area all the food she needs for the maintenance of her war effort, disregarding the food needs of the population in these countries."

Army Needs Are Large

The report said also that the German armies of occupation were consuming substantial amounts of the subjugated countries' supplies.

In Norway alone, it said, the German troops consume enough to keep a fourth of the Norwegian population from malnutrition.

Maintaining farm production was said to be a problem because the Nazis are "drafting Danish, Norwegian, Dutch, Belgian and French, as well as Czech and Polish prisoners and civilians in an attempt to overcome the shortage of farm labor in Germany."

U. S. Men Total 7% of Canada's Air Force

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 23.—Texas and California have, in that order, supplied the highest percentage of the 1,200 United States citizens who have joined the Royal Canadian Air Force or, who are being trained here under the Commonwealth air training plan, it is stated here. Next in order of States from which fliers have come are Georgia and the Carolinas. Almost every State in the Union, however, is represented in the air force in which the proportion of Americans is now given as slightly over 7 per cent.

The number is, however, considered of secondary importance to the fact that a great many of the Americans who have crossed the border to serve under the British flag are experienced fliers with long periods of training either in the American services or in commercial flying and they have done splendid work as instructors of the great army of pilots, bombers, observers and navigators which has been built up during the past 18 months.

All applicants for entry to the R. C. A. F. are ordinarily required to take an oath of allegiance to King George, but in the case of those of foreign birth, where such an oath would entail the forfeiture of citizenship, this oath is not required. The only pledge which candidates for admission to the air force must take, if they are American citizens, is that the information set forth in the prescribed form is correct.

Once in the service, Americans are undistinguishable from Canadians or other British Commonwealth fliers, wearing the same uniform and badges, sharing living quarters and mess accommodations, and getting the same pay. Their country is from the moment of acceptance, the air, and their loyalty is to the force they have voluntarily joined.

Of the 1,200 who on joining admitted their American citizenship, 700 have been trained or are in training as air crews and 400 have been admitted to the training staffs. In addition there are a number of United States pilots engaged in teaching in civilian-operated air observer schools. These men make their own arrangements with the training schools and remain civilians.

A third group, of which members appear from time to time in Ottawa, are men engaged in the Transatlantic Ferry Service—mystery men who go quietly about their tremendous task of flying American built planes across to England. Some of these flights are among the most remarkable accomplishments of the war.

1,272 Prisoners Taken in 7-Day Drive, Greeks Say

Athens, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—A seven-day smashing Greek offensive against the Italians in Albania has resulted in the capture of strong positions and more than 1,272 prisoners, including 30 officers, a government spokesman claimed tonight.

Although it was admitted that Italian resistance was strong, the spokesman said that 16 Fascist counter-attacks were repulsed along the front and six Italian planes shot down.

During the past 24 hours, the spokesman added, there has been "minor successful patrolling." Greek artillery was said to have destroyed two Italian tanks.

The Royal Air Force continued to carry out battering raids on Italian positions, the spokesman added, and Greek operations for the present were devoted chiefly to mopping up and picking up abandoned Italian equipment.

Nazi Censors Conceal Real Raid Damage

War Correspondents Edwin Shanke and Lynn Heinzerling, back home from Germany, bring you a first-hand picture of conditions in Germany as they saw them, in a series of six daily stories. Shanke starts the series off with an account of bomb damage in Berlin.

By Edwin Shanke,
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 23.—British air raid damage in Berlin seems very slight compared with the mass destruction shown in London photographs.

The real importance of the attacks on the German capital appears to lie in their nuisance value, in disturbing the population and in affecting the efficiency of workers. Any observer wandering through Berlin sees little physical evidence of night bombing assaults.

But Berlin alone can't be taken as the measuring rod for the effectiveness of the British air arm over Germany as a whole. The extent of damage is a military secret.

You may travel in and around Berlin at will, but you find no scenes of utter devastation, of areas say the size of a city block which have been leveled. Here and there a shattered building meets the eye.

I remember walking home early one morning after a British raid because the power lines for the street cars in one section of the city had been disrupted.

News of the effects of a night's bombardment spreads through Berlin like wildfire.

Psychologically the British scored a major point when they began their first extended raids on Berlin last August. Until that point Berliners generally believed the British never would be able to touch the capital. The Nazis had told them so. The attacks reminded Berliners that Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering told armaments workers early in the war that his name would be "Schulz" if a single British plane broke through.

At the same time a spy scare spread through Berlin, and many residents eager to get a better view of what was happening during the air attacks took to the roofs. They were believed by many suspicious Nazis to be English agents signaling to enemy fliers.

How effective these attacks have been is a military secret.

To attempt to "see for yourself" might by spying on the army.

There have been conducted tours of areas which the British said they had hit hard.

Newspapermen who toured the Krupp works, gigantic armaments center of Germany, reported their examination disclosed no serious impairment of the plant's operation through bombing, though there were signs that it had been slightly damaged from time to time.

Whether damage in Germany is considerable or not, the German people, like the English, have been put to a "test of nerves." Sitting in cellars night after night doesn't improve efficiency at the work bench the next day.

U. S. Plane Production Impresses Dowding

Chicago, Feb. 23 (INS).—Astonishment at the rapidity with which American aircraft factories are expanding their capacity was expressed today by Sir Hugh Dowding, air chief marshal of the Royal Air Force.

Dowding, who has been on a six-week tour of American aircraft plants, stopped here en route by air to Washington from Boise, Idaho. He said he had been impressed with all the plants he had seen.

Indo-China Truce May Be Extended

Tokyo (Monday), Feb. 24 (AP).—The truce between Thailand and French Indo-China, already once prolonged and scheduled to expire again tomorrow, may be extended a second time, it was reported reliably today.

The contending Asiatic neighbors, brought together under Japan's mediation, seem still to be far from agreement and settlement negotiations are making little, if any, progress.

In the Japanese view, Indo-China is trying to mark time, watching developments in the Orient, while Japan, apparently anxious and resentful over the inclination of some French colonial officials toward friendly relations with the United States and Great Britain, is pressing for a quick agreement.

French Ships Leave

Saigon, French Indo-China, Feb. 23 (AP).—Three French warships headed by the 7,000-ton cruiser Lamotte-Picquet quietly slipped from their Saigon River anchorage today and sailed for an unannounced destination.

The cruiser and her accompanying two destroyers—composing the fighting punch of the French Asiatic naval unit—left smaller but unimportant French gunboats at Saigon.

The reason for the sailings was not given but informed circles pointed out that ships in Saigon could be trapped easily by blocking the narrow river entrance.

Berlin Parley

Berlin, Feb. 23 (INS).—Japan's role in the Far East as an Axis partner and recent American moves in the Pacific today were revealed as the main topic of discussion between Japanese Ambassador Oshima and Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop at a weekend conference at the latter's country estate.

Importance of the meeting was stressed in diplomatic circles which pointed out that it took place even before Ambassador Oshima had presented his credentials to the German government.

Tokyo Leaders Confer

Tokyo, Feb. 23 (INS).—Foreign Minister Matsuoka conferred for four hours today in an extraordinary session of Japanese cabinet ministers and chiefs of the armed forces regarding new developments in the domestic and international situations.

Attending the unheralded session were Minister of Interior Hiranuma, War Minister Tojo, Navy Minister Oikawa, Gen. Sugiyama, chief of the staff of the army, and Vice Admiral Kondo, assistant chief of the navy staff.

Italians to Ignore 'Leave-the-Ship' Plea of Archbishop

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 23.—Italian naval circles said today that the suggestion contained in a letter by Enrico Montalbetti, Archbishop of Calabria, urging naval commanders aboard sinking warships to save themselves instead of disappearing with their ships, would be unheeded.

The tradition of the Italian navy, it was stated, is that the commander of a unit must never leave the ship even though all men and valuable material have been saved.

The letter, which elicited much comment, appeared a few days ago in the Catholic newspaper L'Avvenire. After appealing to naval officers not to make "useless' sacrifices, Archbishop Montalbetti claimed "it is the Christian law that we are not the masters of our life—it is God."

The archbishop added that he was writing "in the name of many of your mothers who implore you to leave the boat last—but leave it" whenever possible.

Victorious Germany Will Need More Babies, Himmler Warns

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Feb. 23.—A German "victory of weapons" must be followed by "a victory of children," says a new magazine which appeared today under the patronage of Heinrich Himmler, chief of all German police organizations.

The Magazine, "Victory of Arms—Victory of Children," declared that the new Germany family for which national socialism is preparing a new era should have four to six children.

Germany, it said, needs an ever increasing number of babies to meet the needs for hands to perform the tasks "which time and destiny are thrusting at the Reich."

In a foreword addressed to the Blackshirt Elite Guard and the police, Himmler said:

"Two weapons are available to every people fighting for its existence, its power to defend itself and its natural fertility."

"Don't forget," he wrote, "that the strength of arms alone cannot assure a people existence into the distant future, but that an inexhaustible fountain of fertility is also necessary. Read this magazine which I give you and conduct yourselves accordingly so that the victory of German arms may be followed by a victory of German children."

Many photographs were presented of the Nordic idea of what the new German era mothers should look like.

The charms of German women are natural, the magazine said, and don't have to be enhanced by "the idiocies of fashion."

D. C. Native Is Back to Stay After 20 Years in France

PLAN THEIR LIVES ANEW—Clifford V. Church is shown with his French wife and their two children, Rosa Marguerite, 16, and Francis, 13

Clifford V. Church was back in his native Washington yesterday with his French wife and their two children. They intend to rebuild their lives in the American way.

The Church family arrived in New York Monday from Lisbon on an American Export liner after living through the months of German occupation of Paris, where Church practived law for nearly 20 years. They are staying temporarily with Church's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert A. Clark, at 119 Sixth Street Northeast.

Church is a graduate of the National University Law School here and was a member of the District bar. He met his wife in Tours, France, after the armistice. He served with the A. E. F. with the rank of major. In 1921 he returned to France to marry Mrs. Church.

This is the first time he has returned to America. It is the first trip here for the members of his family, all of whom are American citizens.

"One of the most wonderful things about your country is the many conveniences you have," Mrs. Church said.

Francis, 13, is enthusiastic about America. He says he can't get used to the idea of going where he wants to when he wants to. His sister, Rosa Marguerite, 16, was sorry to leave France at first because she was forced to interrupt her schooling. Both speak English well.

Before the Nazis marched into Paris, Church sent his family to the seashore. "The city was like a deserted village," he said. "For several days before the Germans entered there had been a stampede to get out. People from Belgium and the north also were pouring through. They streamed out of Paris walking, pushing baby carriages, riding bicycles and trucks and autos."

All members of the family agree that occupied France is restive under German rule and that the French admire the British courage.

New-Type Nets Tested to Guard Ports From Subs

San Francisco, Feb. 23 (AP).—New type steel mesh nets to defend American harbors from submarine and mosquito boat attack are being constructed and tested by the United States Navy in a deepwater cove on San Francisco Bay.

Newsmen, permitted to visit the station yesterday, were told by Commander S. H. Haight that nets still were considered the best harbor defense.

"Cutters now being placed on submarines," he explained, "can cut through the oldstyle net cables like match sticks. That's why we have to make nets of very fine mesh to hold them."

Some 250 officers and men are engaged in the study of trapping under water craft and fashioning defenses to be used in every major United States harbor against attack from the sea.

Strike Ends On Defense Radio Order

By the Associated Press

A nine-day strike by an A. F. L. electrical workers union at the Farnsworth Television and Radio Corporation at Marion, Ind., which has $600,000 worth of contracts for military radio equipment, was settled yesterday and progress made toward adjustment of other labor disputes affecting defense production.

Officials of the C. I. O. automobile workers union and the Nash-Kelvinator Corporation at Kenosha, Wis., which has a $3,000,000 order for Army trailers, reached a tentative agreement to avert a threatened strike, subject to ratification by union members later this week.

Representatives of a C. I. O. clothing workers union and Cluett, Peabody & Co. reported "some progress" in negotiations over strikes at Troy, N. Y., Atlanta, Ga., and Leominster, Mass.

On the other side of the picture, a spokesman for the C. I. O. United Mine Workers served notice that there would be "no work" in the coal mines after April 1 unless a new working agreement is reached with the operators by then.

Members of the C. I. O. steel workers organizing committee completed a secret vote to determine whether to call a strike at the huge Lackawanna plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co., but the result was not announced.

At Lansing, Mich., James Meehan, a representative of the National Defense Council, said the War Department had requested that finished materials in strike-bound plants of the Motor Wheel Corporation be released for immediate delivery.

Meehan, aiding State and Federal labor mediators to end the 11-day-old strike that also has caused suspension of automotive production activities of the Packard Motor Car Co. in Detroit, said settlement of the dispute might soon be reached.

Motor Wheel has $1,400,000 of war orders, but Meehan said he did not know the amount of finished materials.

Labor Rivals On Air Attack Strike Curbs

Representatives of Labor's warring factions formed a temporary united front last night against what they termed anti-labor defense legislation.

Appearing on Theodore Granik's "American Forum of the Air," the organization directors of the C. I. O. and the A. F. L.—Allan S. Haywood and Frank P. Fenton—joined forces in a verbal battle against bills to restrict the right to strike and ban the closed shop.

They participated in a nationally broadcast debate with Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota, author of a bill to require a 10-day waiting period before strikes are called in defense industries, and Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, author of a bill to outlaw the closed shop in defense work.

Ball explained his bill did not prohibit strikes, saying it merely provided a 10-day "cooling-off" period in which disputes could be peacefully conciliated or arbitrated, and asked the labor representatives what their objection was to such a law.

The waiting period, said Fenton, "would be used by antiunion employers to destroy the union."

The workers are "not ready" for such a law, said Haywood. It would disrupt organization efforts in still largely unorganized industries, he said.

Arguing for his bill, Hoffman declared: "I dispute the proposition that you can make a man fight for his country but you can't make him work for his country."

Replied Haywood: "You never get the kind of bill introduced by Congressman Hoffman from the friends of labor."

The program, originating in the Willard Hotel here, was broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting System and WOL.

AP Man Tells Of Desert Trek

the only practical destination we could aim at after leaving the plane at sundown last Tuesday—with the dawn of the third day. We had walked 50 miles.

We found the shore completely deserted for miles. Almost everything we saw was dead, even thousands of sea birds.

Then the second miracle happened.

While we were devising ways of distilling sea water to drink and catching crabs and oysters to eat, the fishermen came by the shack we had built from driftwood, our coats and our shirts.

They were leading a burro train.

Got Ride on Burros

These hardy fellows poured a potent brand of firewater into us, gave us some tough, dry fish to eat, and set us each on a burro.

That was Friday noon.

By driving the burros day and night, they carried us to Morrope, the town closest to the desert's edge, by dusk on Saturday.

From there we came by truck to this place on the Pan-American highway, arriving about 1 a. m. today, to learn that the people we were trying to save already had been rescued and had sent searchers for us.

Although a dozen planes, a corps of Government trucks, and a part of the Army on horseback and other men on foot combed 200 miles of desert, they couldn't find us.

They had considered it humanly impossible for us to have traveled outside that area and so they gave us up for dead.

That we are not dead is the result of a series of things that could never happen but did!

Series of Miracles

The flight began in Iquitos in the Amazon jungle, where I had gone ten days ago to study the only remaining dispute of territory in South America—the boundary area between Ecuador and Peru.

At Iquitos, by the ground crew's error, insufficient gasoline was put into the plane tanks to provide for the extra flying hours that are often necessary on Wells' trips over the Andes but although we ran into a terrific tempest which cut us off of everything on the eastern side of the Andes the gas held out long enough to cross the perilous mountain passes and drop us into the desert.

We came within inches of banging into the face of a peak whose top was buried in clouds hundreds of feet above us when we were flying 15,000 feet up.

When the engines finally quit we fell among tremendous sand dunes capable of smashing any plane. A narrow strip of flat sand suddenly appeared beneath us and we came down there.

Brush Fires Keep D. C. and Area Firemen Busy

High winds gave Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia firemen a busy day yesterday. Twenty brush fires were reported in Washington and more than 30 in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Practically every volunteer fire department in the suburban area of Prince Georges County, Md., responded last night to two fires in the Berwyn district. One on Metzerott Road burned a $3,000 home to the ground, while the other, on Hollywood Avenue, caused damage of approximately $100. Cause of the second was given as defective wiring. The Metzerott Road home was occupied by Holloway Kemp, colored, and his wife.

Aid Bill Faces Battle on Amendments

of the proposals. He did not disclose which amendments would be given consideration but it was reported that a revised suggestion by Wendell L. Willkie, to the effect that the bill name the countries that might receive aid, would receive attention. The Administration has objected to tying the hands of the President to prevent his extending help to countries not now menaced by the Axis powers but possibly in line for future threats.

Chief Administration concern at present is said to center on reported strength for the amendment submitted by Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, to make it clear that the measure confers no power on the President to send troops or naval forces abroad. While the amendment would not limit the President's authority as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, possible psychological effect of its adoption on other powers has caused majority leaders to reject it.

Today's debate will bring Senators Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, and Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, to the floor in opposition to the bill. Senators Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, and Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, are expected to speak for it before amendments are taken up, and Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, is said to be planning one of the longest addresses of the entire fight in opposition to the measure.

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, a supporter, and Senators Johnson (Republican) of California, and La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin, opponents, also are expected to speak.

Despite the speeches still listed, Senator George last night expressed confidence that the final vote could be taken before the weekend. While he has been expected to take the floor in the interest of the legislation, despite a troubled throat that has limited his speaking recently, Senator George indicated last night that he might forego his own appearance in order to expedite action.

The Sunday night addresses for and against the measure were no less emphatic than those that have been delivered on the floor.

Chairman Walsh of the Senate Naval Committee said in a Columbia Broadcasting System address that passing the bill would be "inviting the lightning to strike us before the clouds have appeared over our land."

"It is my belief that if we abjure entry into the present European war," he added, "if we make ourselves strong, if we remain brave and keep our heads, the hour of that fancied and now feared attack upon us by Hitler will never come."

Walsh declared that the provisions of the bill "do not add to our defenses, they subtract from them," and that the measure would "abandon our policy of neutrality" and "commit us to a policy of policing the world."

Senator Chandler declared that the United States would have to live "as a besieged fortress" if England was defeated.

"This will mean nothing else than a permanent burden of armaments so tremendous that it must inevitably threaten the living standards, the security and the economic freedom of the United States," he added.

Chandler said those supporting the bill believed the United States could avoid "active participation" in the war.

Senator Taft, also speaking over the Columbia system, said that permission for the British fleet to use American ports as bases, which "the bill unquestionably permits," had "always been considered an act of war and may well lead to the mining of American ports by German submarines."

"But above all," he continued, "the bill puts the President in a position where he can run the war. He could sit back and direct almost in detail the activities of the British army and navy and every other nation engaged in war with Germany.

"Unless Congress is prepared to declare war itself, it should not pass this bill in its present form. Aid to England can be simply given."

Senator Green declared the bill provided "aid to America," rather than "aid to Britain" as its main purpose.

He said that any aid given to the victims of aggression "helps them to resist the aggressors and thus to weaken the force of any attack which may later be directed against us."

"If they win, we need not fear any attack on America. If they lose the victors will be weaker because of the stronger opposition they have had to overcome, and to that extent America will be relatively stronger than she otherwise would be," he said.

Brooks Predicts Censorship

Chicago, Feb. 23 (AP).—Senator C. Wayland Brooks (Republican), of Illinois, declared today that "the minute" the lease-lend bill is finally passed, "I predict some form of censorship will be adopted in America in the name of national defense—and that is the beginning of the end of freedom of speech."

"Unless checked," he said in an address over the Mutual Broadcasting System, "the President intends to transform this whole Nation into a battle of wartime production of implements of war, and then go out to guarantee freedom to every man in the world.

"And to do that, we have got to engage in not one, but every foreign war now in progress in the world."

Textile Union Joins Backers

Chicago, Feb. 23 (AP).—Members of the C. I. O. Textile Workers Union of America today adopted a resolution endorsing "all aid, short of war and consistent with our own national security, to the people of England, China and Greece."

The action was taken at the close of a two-day session of the union's Midwestern conference attended by 116 delegates, representing 52 locals in 11 Midwestern States.

The resolution did not specifically endorse the British aid bill. President Emil Rieve condemned attempts by States to enact model sabotage acts which he said "have only as their main purpose the abolition of the rights and liberties of labor."

U. S. Bomber Flown to Canada

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—An Americna crew flew to Canada today a 20-ton B-14 Consolidated bomber, which arrived here last week following a nonstop flight from San Diego, Calif.

The plane is scheduled to be flown to England. Before its departure at dawn there were reports at LaGuardia Field that it would be taken to Canada to be fitted with guns.

The bomber is a four-engined high-winged monoplane, one of 26 ordered by the British government.

it to the House floor for debate the same day.

In addition to $4,700,000 for harbor developments and bombproofing at Guam and $8,100,000 for similar work at Samoa, the bill carries a total of about $825,000,000 for the Navy and about $680,000,000 for Army housing. Approximately $338,000,000 of the latter would be devoted to completion of cantonments and other Army projects already under way and for which the original estimates were too low.

In requesting the funds, the Budget Bureau said unit costs for the work had increased from the original estimate of $450 for cantonments to about $7,000, and from $320 to $500 for tent-type camps.

Board to Study Army Morale Safeguards

The problem of maintaining a high morale among selectees through recreation, education and religious activities will be studied here at a four-day conference, beginning tomorrow, of military morale officers and the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation.

The sessions, to be held in the Munitions Building, will deal with maintenance of adequate facilities for entertainment, training and exercise at military camps, as well as wholesome off-reservation recreation.

When the joint committee was organized February 12 it was announced that the War and Navy Departments would be responsible for all activities on their respective reservations, and would work with communities near the bases to develop proper leisure-time recreation.

Frederick H. Osborn, joint committeee chairman, pointed out that in every commmunity civic and religious units are being integrated to form a Nation-wide cohesive organization for the development of armed force morale. This cooperation, Osborn said, is "of primary importance."

The conference will discuss the chaplain's place in morale, athletics in the Army, social problems and service clubs, among other topics.

Labor Shortage for Defense Seen

estimated that reserves of labor would prove adequate. But a new report by the research staff headed by Dr. Lloyd G. Reynolds, of Johns Hopkins University, pointed out that President Roosevelt since has asked for $11,000,000,000 more, "plus an undefined amount for shipment of war materials to Great Britain and other belligerents. . . . The defense program . . . is now limited only by the capacity available for armament production. Fiscal limitations have been virtually discarded."

The staff reached its figure of 4,000,000 available for work by accepting the National Industrial Conference Board's total of 7,217,000 "full-time unemployed" last November and deducting "the estimated workers on Government projects, those on temporary layoff, and those likely to be affected by the draft."

The Fund, research institution, said the findings were being submitted to a committee appointed by its trustees to "make recommendations for action on the basis of the facts." Members of the committee include William M. Leiserson, of the National Labor Relations Board; William H. Davis, retiring chairman of the New York State Mediation Board; Frazier MacIver, vice president of the Phoenix Hosiery Co.; William H. Chenery, editor of Collier's Weekly, and others.

The foundation's earlier forecast of a 6,000,000 increase in the number of employed by the fall of 1942 was abandoned as it said that "barring an early peace the increase will be larger than this" and "will certainly exceed the number of unemployed persons in the labor market." Further, it predicted that the rising trend of employment will continue beyond 1942, the time set previously for the peak, "and reach a higher peak at some later date."

Workers not previously in the labor market must be called on, the report said, pointing out that the normal excess of new workers over retirements will give a net addition of more than a million workers. Many women may enter industry, as was done in the World War, and the reservoir of unused labor in agriculture may help meet the needs.

Pressure for revision of the wage-hour law requiring overtime pay for work above 40 hours a week was forecast the staff writing:

"As labor shortages develop and overtime becomes the general rule . . . (this) would then produce a general increase in average hourly earnings. Higher labor costs would in turn lead to higher prices and profits, though there is no reason why they should generate a cumulative inflation if appropriate measures of fiscal policy are adopted."

The Foreign Policy Association report, while acknowledging that the "economic war potential" of this country is unequalled and that the situation is "by no means alarming at present," said that the national resources will be "insufficient to create, operate and supply a vast munitions industry as well as to satisfy unlimited civilian demands."

Speaking of steel facilities, for instance, it said that "if consumption is left free to develop in the wake of 'armament prosperity,' the industry may be unable to satisfy steel requirements for more automobiles, more houses and more industrial equipment."

The report declared the automobile industry can make "only a modest contribution to the output of planes." The Reuther plan is said by the report "to minimize unduly the great differences in manufacture of planes and automobiles and to underrate the difficulty and time involved in adapting the machinery of the automotive industry for aircraft production.

Present chemical deficiencies were reported as minor compared with those before the World War, but much expansion of facilities for production of explosives was said to be necessary.

The report on the record-breaking 1940 output of American industry came from Secretary of Commerce Jones.

The total for the year was not only the highest, Jones said in a statement, but "at no time during the year did it fall particularly low judged by the average of previous good years."

The index of industrial production issued by the Federal Reserve Board, Jones said, gave the average at 122 for the year (with 1935-1939 equalling 100.) This, the secretary said, was 8 per cent higher than 1937 and 11 per cent higher than 1928, "regarded throughout the past decade as the high water mark of business activity in the United States."

During the first four months production slackened as new orders dropped below shipments and backlogs declined because of a belief that stocks had been overexpanded, Jones said, but even in that period production continued to advance in some lines including aircraft, shipbuilding, newsprint, fuel oil and cigarettes.

The defense program and heavy purchases by Great Britain provided a substantial demand for durable goods after April and expanded public and private investment in plant and equipment.

Machine tool output set a record during the year, Jones said, attaining an index figure of 135. He estimated that production in that line in 1940 was 50 per cent higher than in 1937 and "as much as 75 per cent higher than in 1939." It "would have been even greater had additional tool capacity been available," Jones said.

Based on sound scientific facts, this simple plan should help you in important ways

Would you like to wake up happy, confident, glad-to-get-out-of-bed? Normal people need only a slight extra margin of vitality to do this. It's one of the benefits you may expect from this Lucerne FEEL FIT Program.

Don't pass up this program just because it is simple, inexpensive, easy to follow. Drinking milk (a full glass) with two daily meals is a sound foundation for good health, says science. Because milk benefits us more than any other food . . . in all these ways:

- BUILDS BODY PEP—Milk provides nature's best known protein for repair of worn body cells and muscles. And "protective" vitamin A which helps keep you youthful, vigorous — helps build resistance against colds and sickness.
- STEADIES NERVES—An excellent source of vitamin G and a good source of vitamin B, milk combats nervousness and listlessness. Milk helps preserve normal alkalinity of the blood. It promotes good digestion, restful sleep, and a clear complexion.
- AIDS WEIGHT CONTROL—Milk keeps up body strength and energy while you cut down on heavy, fattening foods. Milk contains so many health elements it should be a foundation food in the weight control diet.
- PROMOTES SOUND TEETH AND BONES—Milk furnishes an abundant supply of calcium and phosphorus, vital food minerals your system needs for strong teeth and bone structure. Calcium is necessary for steady working of the heart and normal muscular activity.

Educators Act Against Threat Of Text Probe

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 23.—A charge that a "substantial proportion" of social science textbooks in the Nation's high schools belittle the American form of Government drew angry rebuttals today from educators.

Their first answer was the formation of a committee of ten social scientists by the American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom to "combat the censorship threat inherent in the textbook investigation."

The accusation that many high school texts are unduly critical of democracy and held the system of free business enterprise "in derision or contempt" was made Friday by Dr. Ralph West Robey, assistant professor of banking at Columbia University.

His survey of 600 textbooks was financed by the National Association of Manufacturers.

Dr. Robey said a few of the textbooks were "obviously communistic" and that the quality of most was at "a very low level."

"The whole emphasis is placed on the one-third of the population who are underfed rather than the two-thirds who are well fed," he added.

"Yet in most instances you don't get a leftist point of view; if you hand an out-and-out leftist slant it would be much simpler to handle. What you get is a critical attitude that is destructive in its influence."

Dean Ned H. Dearborn, of New York University, chairman of the America Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom, said the committee did not question the right of laymen to suggest changes in the schools but that it was "apprehensive" of the use to which the survey abstracts might be put.

"The N. A. M. is a powerful organization and its members have great local influence," he added. "Misuse of these abstracts, in our judgment, will seriously endanger the democratic tradition in this country."

Dean Dearborn said the committee would fight any move to censorship by setting up a board of ten experts to "test the accuracy" of the N. A. M. abstracts.

"There are unfortunately people who believe that the process of education is one of indoctrinating students rather than of helping them to form sound judgments of their own," he said.

Father Sentenced for Killing Husband of Daughter, 14

Farmer Given 99 Years; Didn't Know Couple Were Wed

By the United Press

Fort Worth, Tex., Feb. 23.—Earl T. Brewer, a gaunt farmer who couldn't believe his 14-year-old daughter, Virginia, had married without his consent, was sentenced to 99 years' imprisonment today for stabbing to death her husband of four days, H. Glen Cox.

T jury which deliberated 2 hours and 25 minutes found him guilty of cutting the 19-year-old high school athlete's throat January 10 on a dark staircase in a Fort Worth rooming house. Defense counsel served notice of an appeal.

"They shore drug me over the coals," Brewer sobbed after he heard Judge Willis McGregor read the verdict.

Virginia, the full figured young widow, was not in the courtroom when the verdict was read. She had stayed with relatives while the jurors debated her father's fate, laughing and reading the Sunday comic strips.

When informed of the verdict, tears filled her eyes and she said: "I am very sad."

She did not testify during the trial, since both prosecution and defense feared she might spoil their case because of her conflicting emotions.

"I'll help father all I can," she had said, "but, nturally, I'll never forgive him."

The jury found the 40-year-old farmer guilty despite a dramatic appeal by Defense Attorney Buster Cole to consider the right of a father to protect his child from rape. Brewer testified he did not believe the young couple were married because he never had given his consent.

VIRGINIA BREWER COX

"I thought he had brought her down here and probably ruined her," he said.

Virginia and the Cox youth eloped to Forth Worth on January 6 and spent their honeymoon in a two-room apartment shared by Mr. and Mrs. Z. L. Fendley, another teenage couple.

Brewer and his wife, believing the couple had run off without being married, came to Fort Worth to beg their daughter to come back home with them. The father and husband met on a staircase and the stabbing followed.

Former Slave Of Col. Mosby Dies at 94

Morris Wright, former slave who served during the Civil War as body servant to Col. John C. Mosby, of Mosby's Rangers, died Thursday at his home, 2309 Ainger Place Southeast. He will be buried today.

Wright, about 94, had lived here for half a century and was known as the Mayor of Garfield—a title bestowed on him in honor of his long-standing custom of laying down the moral law to young people in Washington's Garfield community.

The old man, whose bald head was fringed by a rim of white hair and who affected white sideburns and mustache, preached for many years at colored churches here.

Recently the Metropolitan Baptist Church honored him at a memorial service.

He was born on the plantation of Alfred Mosby, near Charlottesville, Va., and when the war started he accompanied Mosby's sons, Col. John S. Mosby and Capt. William Mosby, of the Forty-third Battalion, Virginia Cavalry.

After the war he worked for a while on railroads before coming to Washington, where he lived with his daughter, Mrs. Minta Lancaster. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Metropolitan Baptist Church, with burial in Rosemont Cemetery.

Rites Tomorrow For Fred Rayburn Security Official

Funeral rites will be held tomorrow for Fred M. Rayburn, 45, senior liaison officer of the Social Security Board, who died early Saturday aboard a train en route from Boston to Washington. Services will be held at 2 p. m. in Fort Myer Chapel, with burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

A native of Chillecothe, Ohio, Mr. Rayburn attended Columbus (Ohio) University and the University of London. He served the Federal Government for 25 years, many of them abroad.

Mr. Rayburn was returning from a five-week inspection trip to Boston when he was stricken in the train berth.

He leaves his wife, Sylvia; three children, Eileen Barbara, Fred jr., and Kenneth Eugene; his mother, Mrs. Margaret Rayburn, and a brother, George, both of Mount Sterling, Ohio, and a sister, Allie, of Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Blundon's Funeral Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary C. Blundon, 68, resident of Silver Spring, Md., for 28 years, who died Friday at her home, 10000 Georgia Avenue, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the Grace Episcopal Church, Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Born in Washington, Mrs. Blundon was the widow of Francis A. Blundon, Washington realty broker, who died two years ago. Her sons, Victor S. and Edward F., died within the past four years. She was an active member of Grace Episcopal Church. Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Carolyn Hyam, who made her home with Mrs. Blundon, and Mrs. Bessie Behrens, of Washington.

Mr. McDonald, who had been in ill health for several years, died Saturday night at the home of his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John G. McDonald, Rockville. He was the son of the late Capt. John McDonald, who once represented the Sixth Maryland District in the United States House of Representatives.

Mr. McDonald retired about four years ago from the Veterans Administration in Washington, where he had been an employe for 20 years. He is survived by his son, three sisters, Mrs. George G. Bradley and Miss Jackie McDonald, both of Bethesda, Md., and Mrs. Jessie Childress, of Washington.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur ("Bugs") Baer.

I don't claim to know anything and I have proof of it.

But it seems to me that the Nation's weal and woe amounts to this in Washington: One politician puts his shoulder to the wheel and the opponent hollers, "Whoa."

The Democrats are not so right that they are correct and the Republicans are not so erroneous that they are wrong. I'm for both parties same as I'm for both sides of a waffle.

And I almost believe the dictators are right when they say democracies are cumbersome, unwieldy and sluggish. Right now we have made more motions than a brown bear fighting bumble bees.

So I will sign off with my old reliable advice: When you're in it up to your neck don't make waves.

Cutting A Tax

The unemployment pay-roll tax paid by District of Columbia employers was reduced last year from 3 to 2.7 per cent and benefit payments to insured workers were simultaneously liberalized. Nevertheless the present levy still yields revenue greatly in excess of the amounts currently paid out to beneficiaries. The largest amount of benefits disbursed in any single year so far totals only $4,000,000, yet the accumulated reserve is now over $19,000,000. Consequently the District Unemployment Compensation Board has recommended a sliding-scale basis of tax payments. The rate would be reduced to one-half of 1 per cent as long as the surplus is at least four times the sum of benefits paid out in any one of the preceding ten years. Thus the surplus would be gradually reduced, and as it dwindled below the four-to-one ratio, the basic rate would be stepped up gradually to the maximum 2.7 per cent.

The acceptance of this proposal would thus mean an immediate reduction of the pay-roll levy to the minimum one-half of 1 per cent rate. This would bring a very substantial relief to taxed employer groups. At the same time the benefits payable—which are already extremely generous, judged by the standards set by the States—would be further liberalized. Under the circumstances it is impossible to see how any valid objections can be raised to these proposed amendments to the District Unemployment Compensation Act. It is utterly senseless to pile up reserves in excess of amounts that suffice to provide an ample margin of safety. Both employers and insured employes would profit by the suggested changes in the law, while the sliding-scale arrangement affords ample protection against future inroads upon reserves that might conceivably endanger the solvency of the system.

Exit Litvinoff

Maxim Litvinoff is the latest of the old revolutionaries to be demoted from the hierarchy of the Soviet Union. He has been divested of his post as member of the central committee of the Communist Party. It is said that there is no prospect of one of those dreaded purges which, in fact, redden the name of Stalin. All that has been done is to deprive Litvinoff of his party status. But the announcement has an ominous ring about it. When one fails to do one's duty, as Stalin interprets duty, in the Soviet Union, the penalty is apt to be banishment or worse.

The failure of Litvinoff is generally linked with the failure of the League machinery. Litvinoff belonged to the school of diplomacy which sought to make all nations responsible for any breach of the peace by one of their number—the principle known as collective action. At every meeting of the League he used to chant "Peace is one and indivisible." It was impeccable doctrine to the Leaguers, but Stalin wasted no illusions about the League, even though he appeared to be the most ardent supporter of it. In his view collective responsibility served two definite ends. It was the shield of the Soviet's (meaning Stalin's) security, and it allowed aggression of the covert type familiar as Soviet sabotage to go unmarked as aggression. The League idea, like the Kellogg Pact, was not concerned with hidden warfare—sometimes not even with actual warfare that was not called warfare, such as the Soviet at one time or another has conducted in Manchuria.

When the League idea blew up, accordingly, none felt more alarmed than Stalin. The pact of Munich which to Leaguers brought back the old abuses of power politics, brought back to him the specter of the counter-revolution. The man in the Kremlin has always seen either a German or a Briton under his bed, it is said; now he foresaw them both in unholy capitalist combination against the Soviet Union. It was up to him to frustrate it. And so Litvinoff gave place to Molotoff, and under Molotoff's diplomacy Stalin signed up with Hitler by way of insuring the falling out of the Munich partners. And the coup worked successfully.

In Moscow the new Stalinism was styled "preventive encirclement strategy." It called for tactics aimed not only at keeping Hitler and the British at each other's throats, but also at carving out a safety belt wherever Stalin could collect it. Hence the Baltic acquisitions, the stab in Poland's back, and the pickings in the Balkans. Stalin's main hope of keeping his job, however, lies in the exhaustion of the belligerents, and then he doubtless thinks he might realize himself as the heir of Lenin, and manage the Communist revolution. But such ultimate plans are being perfected without the aid of any of the men whom Lenin would have recognized.

Sycophantic Duce

Benito Mussolini has made a great many speeches in the 18 years since he seized the reins of power in Italy. All of them have been bombastic. In the light of subsequent events, some have been downright funny. A few of them have been good oratory. But it is safe to say that no previous oratorical effort on his part has been so feeble, so lacking in force and fire, so full of inner contradictions as his address of yesterday.

His task, to be sure, was far from easy. He had dragged Italy into war against the wishes of the overwhelming majority of the Italian people. Since then Italy has suffered one major disaster after another—in Greece, Albania, Egypt, Libya and East Africa. Mussolini could not deny these defeats or their magnitude, and his efforts to make light of them as mere episodes on the road to ultimate victory could not have convinced a schoolboy. Italians are realistic people. By this time they know that if the Axis were to triumph, it would not be due to Italy, but to Germany, and that the Italian people are therefore faced only with a choice of conquerors. And anybody who knows the Italians knows that Germany is feared and disliked above all other nations in Italy.

As a pep-talk, accordingly, Mussolini's latest speech is likely to fall flat. However, it was possibly made only as an act of obeisance to Mussolini's boss, Hitler. Again as in his last two speeches the Duce groveled before the Fuehrer—more so on this occasion because Mussolini realizes now more than ever that Hitler alone can keep him in possession of the power and perquisites which he has for so long enjoyed. The spectacle of Mussolini in the role of sycophant should add to the gayety of nations at a time when there is so little to laugh about. Alas, it will be no laughing matter to the heart-sick and harassed people of the peninsula.

Site For A Court

At the behest of the Park and Planning Commission a bill is being drafted to authorize erection of a badly needed new home for the District Court on the site of the old Pension Office next to Judiciary Square. Construction would still have to wait on an appropriation, but the immediate urgency for passage of this bill is to clinch the best possible site for a new court building. Soon the General Accounting Office, which now occupies the Pension Building, will move to another location. For this reason there is available adequate ground adjacent to the other courts and court agencies handling District affairs. Unless the land is dedicated now to this desirable use, the Federal Government might turn it to other purposes, and the chance would thereby be lost to make the physical facilities of the District's courts the unit they should be. Legislation marking the Pension Office site for a District Court building must be advanced for consideration at once.

Textbook Survey

Dr. Ralph W. Robey, of Columbia University, has just completed an extensive survey of social science textbooks used in secondary schools. The study, made at the request of the National Association of Manufacturers, was designed primarily to find out what the textbook writers had to say about the American form of Government and the system of private business enterprise. Dr. Robey concluded that there was little in the books that was actually subversive in content. At the same time he was most unfavorably impressed by the widespread tendency to stress the defects of democracy and the shortcomings of private enterprise. He rightly thinks that immature students should first be taught to understand the principles of democracy and private enterprise, and that, if there is to be any emphasis, that emphasis ought rather to be placed upon the side of constructiveness. Criticism should come at a later stage of education when the student has acquired the information essential to the forming of independent judgments.

The N. A. M. survey calls attention to one of the most difficult problems that confront the country today. This is to inculcate in youth a love for and belief in free institutions without undermining the foundations of our system of liberal education. It is the essence of that system to tolerate dissent; the alternative would be the sort of propagandistic teaching that is a characteristic feature of totalitarian regimes. And the teaching of the social sciences provides an acid test of our ability to maintain a genuinely liberal system of education that will be a source of political strength instead of weakness. For instruction in economics, sociology, history, etc., cannot be reduced to a colorless recital of facts. Nor can the facts be made to fit into universally accepted statements of principles or theories. Consciously or unconsciously every textbook writer is influenced in his method of presenting facts and interpreting them by his personal beliefs and prejudices.

Since bias is inescapable, however, it is not illiberal to demand that American school children gain their first impressions of our political and social institutions from textbook writers who believe in those institutions. That doesn't mean that the N. A. M. any more than the A. F. of L. or the C. I. O. should decide what brand of Americanism is suitable for school children or what textbooks are proper for the schools. Clearly Dr. Robey has no such thought in mind. All he recommends is a comprehensive survey of textbooks by authorities in various fields of learning preliminary to a weeding-out process. A glance at some of the excerpts from textbooks surveyed for the N. A. M. certainly shows that speedy action ought to be taken to protect children from the impact of injudicious criticism that destroys belief before a basis for understanding has been laid.

If Winter Comes—?

With the month of March now almost on the doorstep, so to speak, the question is, how long and how leonine the roars will be? In other words, shall we have an early spring in Washington this year or not? Since the Weather Bureau, with its customary timidity, declines to go out on a limb concerning anything further away than tomorrow, we must consult the other oracles.

First of all there is the learned Prof. Marmota Monax, or the groundhog. Every year a great deal of attention and publicity is given to the professor's prognostications, but somehow nobody ever seems to have made a statistical survey of his record of hits and misses. Anyhow, the professor says this year that he intends to remain underground for another three weeks at least, thereby giving us to infer that the winter of 1940-41 has a few pretty good punches left.

However, it is interesting to note that the professor's pessimism is not shared by his neighbors—which is to say, by the other small furbearing animals inhabiting the parks and woods. These are said to be rapidly shedding their winter coats, and their habits in these matters are said to be governed by a prescience beyond the ken of mere meteorologists. But, then, so are the migratory habits of birds. And in the countryside around Washington early robins are reported still as scarce as early roses. However, our poetry editor notes a very perceptible increase in the number and net weight of the manuscripts submitted—always a sure sign of spring.

If you will take the trouble to arrange these several signs and portents in the form of an algebraic equation, you will observe that they cancel out perfectly. Evidently, this means that Washington will have, as usual, both an early spring and a late one—which is to say, several kinds of weather at once, alternate spring and winter in the same day, or possibly in the same hour. One thing we can rarely complain about in our weather is lack of variety.

Investigating Defense

Whenever Congress grants extensive powers to the President investigations are almost sure to follow to determine whether the legislative policy is being properly carried out. So there is nothing strange about the approval by the Senate Military Affairs Committee of the Truman resolution calling for a "full and complete" inquiry into the defense program. Both the Senate and the House must keep themselves informed as to the progress of our rearmament effort. Only in that way can they hope to make certain that the enormous sums appropriated for the Army and Navy are being wisely and effectively spent and that extraordinary powers are being judiciously used. Care should be taken, however, to prevent any inquiry of this sort from delaying the urgent work of building airplanes, tanks, guns and ships. Certainly the Senate and House ought not to make separate investigations that would unnecessarily occupy the time of defense officials. And the inquiry should be surrounded by special safeguards to assure ample protection of military and naval secrets.

WIND-WAIL

A lean and loveless and lonesome cry
Is the wail of the wind when the wind blows by

Where the fields of stubble are stark and brown,
When crows fly over, when leaves are down.

That time of the year, that time of the day
When the sun slants west, when the west goes gray,

I pity the lonely lads who know,
By wintry ways that I used to go,

On hill, in hollow, by cold stone wall,
The slant and swirl of the first snow-fall.

I pity the lonely lads who hear
The wail of the wind that time of the year

When the wind cries over the corn-cut ground,
A lean, a loveless, a lonesome sound.

Of Misunderstanding

If because the Germans have waged war on innocents they are innately evil, as many contend, then what shall we say of those religionists of early America who burned women as witches; or of the holy Christian crusaders who needlessly slew thousands of Moslems for the mere possession of Christ's tomb; or of the people of the South who enslaved the Negro; or of those people who mercilessly waged war on the Indians, the Boers and the aborigines of Australia? Certainly not that they were "innately evil?"

To my way of thinking, the reason for all of these injustices is expressed in the latter part of the following appeal: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

Anger, fear, pride, covetousness, and lust are almost universally admitted as being the causes for the injustices of man against his fellow beings, and anyone who has carefully studied his own life must realize that no one under the influence of these emotions has either reason or judgment, and consequently, is without understanding.

A Big Order

In one breath we are asking God to save the King, bless America, and damn the Germans. That's a pretty big order for God, don't you think?

Washington, Feb. 21 S. D. M.

Parking Solution

We may, of course, take it for granted that when Virginia Avenue has been crowned with another magnificent public building and others of the few remaining traffic bottlenecks in the downtown area are similarly sacrificed to artistic and social gains in housing bureaucracy, Easter tourists, flocking to see the blooming Japanese cherries and finding themselves muddling comfortably through traffic jams while viewing the poverty (of parking space) in the midst of plenty (of gloriously empty park space), will thrill with the pride of knowing that "we planned it that way."

It is also granted that to get out and see the Capital City will then be a simple matter of driving down to the other end of the Pan-American Highway and parking in Buenos Aires. It may be granted, too, that once parked in the fresh, foreign air of the Let's Send Policy at the other end of the American Way, it can be permanently "planned that way" for us to enjoy a plenty of empire in the midst of a poverty of peace without disturbing any of our "democratic" poverty in the midst of plenty. Handicapping Defense

How "tickled" Hitler would be if he could read in our daily paper—"2 Strikes Slow Up Work on Army Orders!" What an advertisement such things are for patriotism among our labor organizations! Suppose our soldiers struck, and refused to carry out Army orders? I imagine that Adolf is not bothered with such tie-ups in his great undertaking. It is not hard to imagine what would happen did any such thing occur.

Germany has a dictator—we have not, and I hardly think there is much danger of our having one, so long as President Roosevelt is at the helm. When his opponent was beaten during the recent election, what did he say? "He (Mr. Roosevelt) is my President."

When the German army invaded and "conquered" Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark and Norway, what became of their presidents?

I am quite sure that our President would not kill off his political opponents no matter how much power he was vested with. I am sure he has no desire to invade any other country which is minding its own business.

Every true American well knows that such things are not the American way, but the way of a tyrant steeped in crime and brutality.

Our present folly seems to be endless quibbling and delay in these vital moments, which call for immediate action! We believe in freedom and liberty, and we know England is fighting for her life, and these things which we don't want to see pass from this earth, yet we delay and fumble instead of offering immediate aid to her. We should be thankful that she does not need an additional army.

Lend-Lease Delays

It seems most regrettable the lease-lend bill takes so much valuable time now when the British so need our help—encouragement at least. I believe the American people are almost unanimous in a desire to see Britain win and would favor legislation to that effect if properly acted upon. The Republicans have shown a willingness to cooperate in the help to Britain if given a chance. However, the framers of that bill made it difficult not only for the Republicans, but also made its defeat possible by the Democrats who are opposed to dictatorial powers that it gives one man. In these days when Congress sits 366 days at a session there is no excuse of emergencies arising with an absent Congress. And Congress will act quick enough on such matters when not framed in a partisan way. It's late already, but let's hope the Administration will see the wisdom of the Willkie suggestions to alter the bill if necessary to get quick action to show unison.

Double Parking

Some time ago the Metropolitan Police Department issued a decree to the effect that double parking was to be banned completely from the streets of Washington. This very good suggestion has not been carried out at all. Along the route I follow every morning, namely M Street from Georgetown to Sixteenth Street Northwest, at any hour of the day and on any day—one can find double parking at its peak. Nothing seems to be done about it.

There are "No Parking at Any Time" signs which must have cost the taxpayers a tidy sum, as there are at least 200 of them scattered along the north side of M Street from Twentieth to Connecticut Avenue, but cars and trucks park as they please, not long enough to get in trouble, mind you, but just long enough to mess up the flow of early morning traffic.

Crucial Years—1781 and 1941

H. R. 1776 suggests another date. In 1781 was fought the Battle of Yorktown. From 1781 to 1861 is 80 years. From 1861 to 1941 is another 80 years. The identity of the two periods suggests that the present year is likewise a crucial one in American history.

The comparison in time leads to a comparison in strategical elements. In 1781 the Continental Army was not of itself strong enough to win the Battle of Yorktown. It was assisted by a French army under Rochambeau and a French naval squadron under de-Grasse. The strength added by the former's 6,000 men and the latter's 24 ships was the strategical factor which turned the tide.

The comparison in strategy follows logically. The whole French army and the whole French navy did not cross the Atlantic to fight at Yorktown. England and France were not even officially at war with each other. Only a small French force crossed. But the addition of the strength of those small forces was decisive. The result was the founding of the United States of America.

Only the narrowest of isolationists believes that it is a matter of indifference to us which side wins in 1941 the Battle of Britain. All thinking Americans know that our future security will be largely influenced by its result. In what way shall we meet that situation?

Most people appear to believe that there is no alternative between the two extremes. One is aid to Britain restricted to our own 3-mile limit. The other is sending a full-scale expeditionary force of 2,000,000 men. This belief omits the experience of the Battle of Yorktown.

If 6,000 Frenchmen could in 1781 sway the decision to a victory for the 10,000 men of the Continental Army, what could 60,000 Americans do in 1941 for the 2,000,000 men of the British army? It is certain that Britain, like the Continental Army, is almost strong enough to win. But if Britain alone should prove to be only almost strong enough to win, so far as we are concerned it might as well be no stronger than Holland and Belgium. For in this war only actual victory will count.

If 60,000 Americans highly trained in the operation of destroyers and aircraft undertook to insure the delivery where they are needed of the products of our factories, they might add the strength necessary to turn defeat into victory. Could there possibly be any greater profit to America than that? Their effort, if the decisive addition to British strength, would save us unknown multiples of billions of dollars in future defense and quite possibly millions of lives.

We do not know definitely that their added strength would be decisive. But this we do know definitely. Such an effort would not increase in the slightest the ultimate risk to us. For that risk exists independent of any decision of ours. It exists because totalitarians conquer whom they can when they can. If in some future year they were stronger than we, a record of most scrupulous neutrality in 1941 would mean no more than did the neutrality of the Danes, Norwegians, Dutch and Belgians.

As of 1941, the risk to us is zero. Even if the British fleet were handed over intact to Germany it would take them two years to train crews. But in the event of a German victory, the prospective risk to us will be as definite as was in 1938 the prospective risk to Britain.

We have an opportunity to endeavor to avert that prospective risk now by adding to British strength while Britian is still strong. We can add to British strength by delivering the products of our factories under the protection of the guns of our destroyers and aircraft. We can do that without increasing the risk to ourselves, which exists independent of our actions and cannot therefore be increased by them. The result could parallel Yorktown, where the small added forces of a friendly power turned the tide and made possible the victory.

And, as France was not actually at war in 1781, neither would it be necessary for us in 1941 to declare war. G. B. STUDLEY.

The Post Impressionist

Pavlick At The Opera

SINCE PAVEL IVANOVITCH had no visible source of income, I was amazed and puzzled when he telephoned me one afternoon and invited me to go to the opera with him that evening.

"They are singing 'Aida,' such a lovely opera, and the great Russian prima donna, Mme. Khartzanova, is Aida, and I would be so delighted if you would go with me. Please, Vanya?" asked Pavel Invanovitch.

"I would be happy to," I told him. And, thinking that I should do something to mark my appreciation of this most unusual gesture, I added, "Won't you have dinner with me before the opera?"

"That would be lovely, dearest Vanya," Pavlick assured me.

Then I thought I saw the light. One of Pavlick's rich friends on Beacon Hill had no doubt given him a couple of tickets which he was unable to use. To make sure, I asked, "Are we dressing?"

"Oh, no. After all," said Pavel Ivanovitch, with a gay laugh, "I am only a poor music student. Let us be informal, like the students in Le Vie de Boheme."

Being yet in my salad days, I was inclined to stand on my dignity as a Harvard man, but I unbent sufficiently to propose Le Cafe de Paris as a suitably Bohemian spot. Pavlick consumed the super-special $1.50 dinner of eight courses with great gusto, regaling me the while with tales of his dear, dead father, who this time was quite definitely a general in the Czar's most select and distinguished personal regiment.

By the time we reached the dessert, Pavlick's father was no longer resting in a nameless grave with a Bolshevik bullet in his brain, as was customary. It turned out that he had been at Ekaterinburg with the imperial family and had shared their fate. In fact, his bones were mingled with the august remains of the imperial family.

Normally, this reference to the departed glories of his father would have been followed by a dissertation upon his present outcast state, penniless, an exile from his own dear native land. This time, however, Pavlick was in a great hurry, and, although it was a full hour before curtain time, he insisted that we leave at once and rush to the opera house. When we arrived there, Pavlick led me to the stage door and gave me a ticket which certified that I was a student at the New England Conservatory of Music and as such was entitled to play the role of super in "Aida."

It was a great insult to my Cantabridgian dignity that the doorman did not spot me at once as an imposter. We were admitted without any question, however, and Pavlick led me, bewildered by the bedlam, to the men's dressing room. There we stripped and donned the scanty costumes appropriate to our roles. I must admit that what there was of Pavlick's set off his figure most handsomely. To be sure, his figure wasn't quite what it had been last spring at the end of the courses of exercises at the Y. M. C. A., but still it was a splendid figure, and Pavlick knew it. He flexed his muscles and strode about the room in attitudes which he was obviously modeling after those of Mr. Ted Shawn, whom we had recently seen.

"Don't you think that I am in lovely condition, dearest Vanya?" he asked me. "Look at the muscles in my arms, how hard and strong they are. And look at my legs, how firm and well shaped they are. That comes from riding a bicycle when I was a cadet in the imperial navy." Pavlick stood on toptoe and waved his right leg about gracefully.

"And from swimming at the 'Y,'" I reminded him, determined to give credit where credit was due, since I had paid for his membership.

"Oh, yes, of course," Pavlick agreed. "But come, let us look at the stage."

Pavlick rushed gaily about, greeting all his fellow students, while I looked forlornly for a radiator. I think I was supposed to represent an Egyptian soldier prepared for active duty in the tropics. At any rate, my breech-clout was scant protection against the frigid backstage regions of the Boston Opera House. At last I found what was apparently the only radiator in the building and shared it with a shivering Nubian slave from Tennessee. We agreed that the roses would still be blooming down in our part of the country, and we had succeeded in making each other thoroughly homesick when the bell rang and we were summoned to our places.

Pavlick assured me that he knew exactly what to do, and that so long as I followed him I would be quite all right. Although my entrance was not greeted by any prolonged applause, I felt that I made a very creditable operatic debut. At any rate, I contrived not to get in anybody's way, and I retained a firm grasp on my spear.

Mme. Khartzanova was in excellent voice, Pavlick told me, but I thought that both she and her voice would be much the better for a prolonged rest. Pavlick contrived to edge near her after one of her exits and greeted her in her native tongue. She appeared overjoyed and controlled her breathing with difficulty. They had a long conversation.

When the performance was concluded and the cast had taken their curtain bows, demanded with even more than customary Bostonian restraint, Pavlick and I shed our costumes.

"Ah, Vanya, such a tragedy," sighed Pavlick, as he laid aside his trappings. "I do such thoughtless things."

"What have you done?"

"Mme. Khartzanova is such a lovely lady, a Russian like myself, and you cannot imagine what a joy it is for a Russian to meet another sympathetic soul who is also an exile from his own dear native land. We feel as though we had known each other all our lives!"

"You can be thankful that she hasn't known you all her life," I remarked. "That would just about double your age."

"Ah, Vanya, how can you say such things? She is so charming, and she is Russian. And, like the thoughtless fool that I am, I asked her to have supper with me after the opera, before I even thought that I did not bring any money with me. Vanitchka, my dearest and only friend, what am I to do?"

I sighed. "Would $10 be enough? That's all I have."

Pavlick embraced me warmly. "Ah, darling Vanitchka, you are just like a Russian in your heart!"

The Duce Explains

By Barnet Nover

Italy's Dark Outlook

THE FASCIST leaders who assembled in the Adriano Theater in Rome yesterday to listen to Mussolini's first address in three months did what was expected of them. They cheered themselves hoarse every time the Duce stuck out his jaw, roared with laughter at even the feeblest of his sallies, and showed unrestrained enthusiasm over his pledge of an ultimate victory for the Axis.

NOVER

But the Italian masses will find little comfort and less amusement in Mussolini's remarks. What he had to say on this occasion will merely confirm them in their belief that whichever side wins the war Italy will be the loser.

Proof of this is to be found not only in the long list of unbroken disasters suffered by Italian forces in Greece, Albania and Africa during the last four months. The Italians will also find confirmation for their gloomiest forebodings in Mussolini's boast of the vast power which Germany is ready to throw into the scales, his attempt to deprecate the assistance that the United States may render Great Britain and last, but not least, his admission that the war may last a long time.

MUSSOLINI is always right, says the Fascist apothegm emblazoned in large letters on 10,000 Italian walls. The mockery of that assertion is now borne out in the Duce's own accounting of what has happened in North Africa.

To disprove the charge that the Fascist government had been negligent in its preparations Mussolini revealed that a formidable Italian force of more than 400,000 officers and men had been assembled in Libya, that their equipment included no fewer than 779 tanks, 8,584 trucks, 4,809 motorcycles, 1,924 cannon of all sizes, 15,386 machine guns, 11,000,000 rounds of shells and a billion and a third rounds of small arms ammunition. A considerable part of that great store of arms and ammunition is now in British hands. The Italian forces in Libya proved incapable of defending themselves, let alone carrying out a successful offensive against the British. In view of that fact Mussolini's references to the German armored units and planes now in the Mediterranean area can only mean that if Great Britain is compelled to give up what she has gained at Italy's expense it will only be as a result of German, not of Italian efforts.

MUSSOLINI tried to minimize the seriousness of what had happened in Greece and Albania. Italy's losses in the Greek campaign, he said, were limited to "a few thousands, mostly wounded," while the Greeks' losses have been "extremely high." And it was with suspicious vehemence that he insisted that Italian soldiers in Albania "have fought superbly."

But in Albania, too, as in Africa, Mussolini was practically forced to admit, the victory of the Axis, which he regards as certain, will primarily be a German, not an Italian victory. He made no reference in this connection to what is going on in and around Bulgaria. Perhaps he felt it unnecessary to do so. The Italian press has jubilated over the reports that a large German army has been assembled in Rumania and is about to cross the Danube into Bulgaria if it has not already done so. It has proclaimed as a great diplomatic triumph for the Axis the recently concluded Turkish-Bulgarian pact of nonaggression. Yet these developments, insofar as they involve a strengthening of Germany's position in the Balkans, are not a triumph but a defeat for Italy, however useful they may be to Mussolini personally.

THERE ARE indications that the British will not stand by with hands folded while Hitler sends his legion in the direction of Saloniki. The British are not as helpless in the Eastern Mediterranean as they seemed to be some months ago. They enjoy undisputed naval control of that area; they have an army and an air force in North Africa only part of which may be necessary to complete the job of driving out the Italians from their last foothold at Tripoli, should Gen. Wavell decide to attempt it. It is thus not at all inconceivable that British troops and British planes will be sent to Saloniki to bar the way of the southward-pressing Germans. But no matter what the outcome of the present Anglo-German jockeying for position in Southeastern Europe may be, the fact remains that so far as Great Britain is concerned the war will be won or lost at home, not in the Eastern Mediterranean.

FOR ITALY, however, the presence of German troops in the Balkans writes finis to an ambition which Mussolini has tenaciously held for years, namely, to make the Balkans an Italian sphere of influence. It was to that end that the Fascist government long ago became the patron of Bulgaria, whose monarch married a daughter of Victor Emmanuel III. It was to achieve a foothold in the Balkans from which Italian influence might spread that Albania was brought under Rome's wing. It was to clinch that ambition that Greece was invaded.

Mussolini must now reckon with the fact that the dominant power in the Balkans is not Italy but Germany, that the precarious foothold which Italy still maintains in the Balkans can only be protected if Germany intervenes. And if Germany intervenes the fruits of victory would go to the Reich not to Italy just as the fruits of the victory over France went not to Italy but to Germany.

So Italy finds herself pushed out everywhere. Her African domain is being cut to pieces even as Winston Churchill promised it would be. Her Balkan hopes, first battered by the Greeks, now bid fair to be shattered by the Germans. The Mediterranean is not Mare Nostrum but a British lake. All that is left to Italy after six years of unceasing war, vast privation and much bloodshed is the Italian peninsula itself. And even that may remain true only for a while longer. Already advance units of the Reichswehr and the Gestapo have crossed the Brenner and have established themselves as far south as Italy. The betrayal of Italy is now complete.

Censorship In Ashcan

By Ernest Lindley

Rejected By President

THE PRESIDENT has unceremoniously thrown into the ashcan a plan for censorship of the press and radio submitted by some high-ranking officials concerned with national defense. This plan would have established a rather tight central control by officers of the armed services over information about national defense.

The plan was drawn for submission to the President last June. It was evidently expected by its authors that it would be put into effect at once. But for reasons unknown to them it did not come to the President's attention at that time. As the summer wore on the excitement engendered by the fall of the Lowlands and France died down.

Recent growing international tension, combined with the leakage of information deemed important to the national security, revived the censorship question. The June plan was brought out again. This time it reached the President himself. He promptly and emphatically quashed it. He made it clear that he regarded it as unsuitable for use now or in the event of a full emergency or war itself.

This action by the President almost immediately preceded his press conference Friday, at which he raised a question of ethics in the publication of what purported to be items of information given secretly by Gen. Marshall, chief of staff, to the Senate Military Affairs Committee. The President said that the stories published were at variance with what Gen. Marshall actually had said, but that they had nevertheless been injurious to the national security. It may be inferred justifiably that the information which leaked was not altogether wrong. It was brought out at the press conference that the Navy Department had unofficially confirmed one item in it.

THE PRESIDENT did not need to dwell on the unidentified Senator or Senators who repeated the testimony. He said he did not blame the newspaper correspondents who succeeded in obtaining the information. It was part of their job, he said. But he raised the question whether newspaper bureau heads, editors and publishers, and the radio should publish military information which they knew had been given to a Senate committee under the seal of secrecy.

In the President's remarks there was no threat or hint of compulsory censorship, except as the phrase might be applied to the withholding at the source of secret information deemed vital to the national security. Instead the President was, by implication, inviting the voluntary cooperation of the press and radio in suppressing information which it knew to be of such secret nature.

Very little information has been withheld, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized, and that little only on the advice of the heads of the Army and Navy. Until the last few months this withheld information has been chiefly technical data on the designs and performance of various weapons and military devices. Over the last year or so, the area of "prohibited" matter has been extended. In the case of the Navy it includes all information concerning the movement of naval vessels and personnel. Secretary Knox recently called upon the press and radio to withhold from publication all such facts, regardless of the sources from which they were received.

What should be withheld at the source, and what should not be, has not been any too clearly defined at either the War or Navy Departments. There have been many ludicrous results, such as refusals to supply data which already had been published in the Congressional Record.

THE PRESIDENT has made it plain that while he will be guided by the advice of the Army and Navy heads in determining what should be kept secret in the interest of national security, military and naval officers are not to be the sole judges. The War Department Press Bureau has been separated from the Military Intelligence section of the General Staff and is being reorganized under Reserve officers with newspaper experience. It may later come under full civilian direction.

In the event of a full emergency, or of actual war, there undoubtedly will be closer control than now exists over the release of information to the press and radio. Several plans looking forward to such a contingency have been drafted. In addition to the quashed one outlined above, at least two propose rather extreme centralized control.

All of these extreme plans are frowned upon by Stephen Early, press secretary to the President, and Lowell Mellett, director of the office of Government Reports. They are both men of long practical experience, and both are intellectually and emotionally opposed to censorship. They are the President's chief advisers on relations with the press and radio. In general, they both believe in the least control that is consistent with national security.

The President's present attitude reveals that he is in agreement with Early and Mellett, rather than with more extreme advisers. The problems posed are not simple. But the President has made it clear that in working them out he is seeking voluntary cooperation from the press and radio.

Pacifists and Fascists

By Dorothy Thompson

About A Meeting In New York

THE TRUTH, in the shape of inevitable alignments, prevails above the depressing confusions of the muddle-headed. Senators Wheeler and Nye, together with John T. Flynn and Norman Thomas, held a meeting in New York to protest the lend-lease bill, which, in the words of Senator Wheeler, will lead us "straight into an armed imperialism necessarily Fascist."

THOMPSON

Joe McWilliams, who is an ambitious and tough-minded Fascist demagogue, attended the meeting with a cohort from the Christian Front, whose Christianity consists of wanting bigger and better Crucifixions, and the American Destiny party, which is Fascist and imperialist.

The gentlemen on the platform, honest pacifists all, no doubt, reproved their uninvited supporters. But Joe McWilliams grinned as he greeted his followers filing out of the meeting, and said he didn't mind the remarks of the speakers advocating racial and religious tolerance. "As long as they are half right, it's all right with me," he is reported to have said.

THE COMPANY must have somewhat upset Mr. Norman Thomas, who has dedicated his life to social democracy, but who, with the peculiarly narrow vision characteristic of social democrats the world around, insists on laying the faggots and hauling up the rope for the lynching of social democracy.

ALL OVER THE WORLD it has been the same. But Mr. Thomas refuses to contemplate reality as expressed in experience. Reality does not follow the formula. The formula, which has been learned by rote not only by Mr. Thomas but by most of our college students, is that all wars are imperialist and all wars result in the establishment of fascism at home.

BUT JOE McWILLIAMS, who has no formula but has observed facts, has merely noticed that every victory for fascism means more fascism. Mr. McWilliams wants fascism in America, so he wants Britain defeated. Britain will certainly be defeated if we withhold every aid we can give. Therefore Mr. McWilliams is delighted with Mr. Thomas, who is "half right, and therefore all right with me." For Mr. Thomas' half-rightness is the half-rightness of that democratic impotence which is always the first step to fascism. Mr. Thomas will not do a thing for fascism—which he honestly loathes—except to disarm democracy. But that's enough for Joe McWilliams.

The Mr. Thomases of Germany, whose names were Herr Braun and Herr Severing, were in power in the Prussian government in 1932, with 300,000 armed police under them. They gave up that power on a mere ultimatum from Hitler via Herr von Papen, for they, too, were honest pacifists who fainted at the thought of blood. What blood has flowed since then! What migrations, exiles, concentration camps, torture barracks! What wars!

The reality was before their eyes: We or they? But the formula was in their heads—the pacifist formula that obsesses those who live in the limbo of a world they imagine but are utterly unable to build—the dream world of those who cannot bear the stark reality.

THEIRS IS NOT the world of Gandhi, nor the world of the Quakers, who, believing in other weapons than force, mobilize those weapons for hard resistance. Theirs is the world of the escapists, who avoid all hard personal choices, by professing themselves unwilling to make a choice for others. But no one needs to make a choice for anybody except himself, and to testify to his own decision. Mr. Thomas only has to make a choice for Norman Thomas. He merely has to ask himself "Which side am I on—to the death if necessary?"

But Mr. Thomas avoids this question by saying he doesn't like either of the sides. His side doesn't exist, except in his own mind. Thus he creates an intellectual and moral no-man's-land and calls it pacifism. And suddenly—and apparently to his astonishment—this no-man's-land is peopled with Fascists.

They are political parachute troops, Mr. Thomas, who move into all vacuums; they have come in to help you cut the communications with reality.

THE REALITY is that this is not an imperialist war, except on the side of the Axis. The reality is that no country ardently and unitedly resisting fascism or communism has become either Fascist or Communist. Finland did not become Fascist or Communist; Britain has not become Fascist. On the contrary, every democratic institution of England is functioning with superb efficiency, from Parliament to the trade union congress, and Britain has freer speech and infinitely more social and economic democracy than she had in the hush-hush days around Munich.

The reality is that this is a worldwide defense against a tidal wave of red-brown counter-revolution, falsely calling itself revolution, which aims to sweep away all the institutions of civilized man and the civilized values that you, Mr. Thomas, prize. You cannot avoid the issue by saying that democracy is not perfect, or that only democratic socialism is worth fighting for, or that one should suspend judgment until we can see the whites of the Fascist eyes. You, Mr. Thomas, can see the whites of their eyes right out there in the hall you are addressing! There they sit, applauding you! Doesn't it seem that maybe there's something wrong?

THERE IS SOMETHING WRONG. What's wrong is your formula. Joe McWilliams, who supports you today for your half-rightness, will kill you tomorrow for your other half-wrongness. Mr. McWilliams, with his primitive but not befuddled mind, sees things much more clearly than you do. This is a fight; he has chosen the winner: and, for the time being, you are his ally. Communism and fascism take their allies when and where they find them. One can always stage a purge later.

AS TO SENATOR WHEELER: I can only wish that, in deference to the intelligence of the American people and in consideration of the fact that he is a United States Senator, he would take a few days off to study the structure of the British Empire. For it is embarrassing to Americans who have gone to high school to hear the Senator call Canada a "colony" of Britain and to say that in Britain the King declares war "with Parliament not permitted to vote."

In Great Britain, Senator, the King declares war on the advice of the cabinet, and the cabinet is, at all times, subject to a vote of no confidence, and thus to recall.

Apparently the Senator thinks that to say that Canada is not a colony but a sovereign state and that the King does not arbitrarily declare war with no popular control is British propaganda. Probably "highly subsidized" by the Encyclopaedia Britannica! Probably "warmongering."

Laymen Fill Methodist Pulpits At D. C. Services

Laymen filled many Methodist pulpits here yesterday as Washington joined in a Methodist Church-wide celebration of "Laymen's Day."

Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, like many others, had a guest speaker—Dr. Stewart Patterson, who called for "loyalty and devotion to the Church and all for which it stands."

"We believe," he said, "that the Church has something the world must have, and without which men and society will perish—the Christian religion. Our task is to see that people hear it, know it and practice it." He is chairman of the Board of Lay Activities of the Baltimore Conference, Methodist Church.

Alden Hoage, president of the Men's Class of Eldbrooke Methodist Church and active worker in the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association, spoke from the pulpit at his church at the morning service.

Capital Parade

By Joseph Alsop And Robert Kintner

America's Beaverbrooks

AT PRESENT no one can say precisely whose job it is to plan and execute the crucial air production program. The very officials now at work on it are far from certain, so vaguely is the responsibility dispersed between the Office of Production Management, the War and Navy Departments and several other agencies. After much travail, however, a rational solution of the problem at last seems to be in prospect.

The solution, like most rational solutions, is pretty simple. Already on the job in the War Department is Robert Lovett, a wartime air ace and New York banker recently brought into the Government by his friend Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson. Now at leisure is Thomas G. Corcoran, once the spark plug of the New Deal group, and a friend of Undersecretary of the Navy James Forrestal. If the solution above mentioned is not still-born, Lovett will be named Assistant Secretary of War, with the aviation program as his special field, and a roughly equivalent place will be made for Corcoran at the Navy Department. Thus the basic responsibility will at last be clearly fixed, and fixed furthermore, in the hands of two men who can work easily together, and are the sort to get a job done.

BEFORE LOVETT AND CORCORAN can be definitely gazetted, however, an alternative solution, equally interesting but less administratively probable, must first be disposed of. New York's bustling Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, another wartime airman, has long been anxious to get a big job in the national defense setup and he is now reportedly being backed by Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., for the position of America's Beaverbrook.

LaGuardia's supporters are extremely secretive. It is difficult to discover just whose functions they propose to transfer to the mayor. But the best guess is that the big new air division of the OPM would be put under him, and that he would be given at least part of the authority for air procurement now lodged in the procurement branches of the War and Navy Departments. In short, whatever his official rank, he would become the American equivalent of an air production minister.

Secretary Mongenthau has a voice in the matter as the man chosen by the President to be the spokesman of the British in the Government. His backing of LaGuardia is no doubt traceable to natural impatience with the air production setup now in operation. The original scope of preparation was far too small. Recognition of its inadequacy has been far too slow in coming. Men like Lovett trying to improve and enlarge the program, immediately found themselves enmeshed in the intricacies of Rube Goldbergian administrative machinery. For months naming an air production czar has been one obvious remedy, and LaGuardia certainly possesses the toughness, drive and bounce required for efficient czardom.

THE TROUBLE with the LaGuardia appointment is, quite simply, that it has been proposed too late. Had the President taken the plunge last June, or even immediately after the election, all would have been well. But the mayor is a man who suffers no competitors or even coadjutors. If he gets even a part of the air job in his hands, the fur will fly until he has it all. As a good many able men are on the job already, the sudden recruitment of LaGuardia would be likely to disorganize the entire defense setup for a considerable period thereafter. For this reason Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Undersecretary Forrestal strongly resisted an effort to locate LaGuardia in the Navy Department. And again for this reason, all the chiefs of the defense services will be sure to fight Morgenthau's plan tooth and nail, making its adoption a poor bet.

The comment on this situation might be, "Better late than never," if the plan proposed by the defense services were not extremely attractive.

In the short time he has been in charge of the air problem at the War Department, Lovett has shown enough good sense, decision and imagination to equip several Government officials. Whatever may be thought of his opinions on domestic policy, there can be little question that Corcoran's energy and drive equal LaGuardia's, or that he knows better than anyone how to carry a project unscathed through the mazes of the governmental labyrinth. The human factor is always the weightiest in any governmental equation, and if solid authority is confided to Lovett and Corcoran, the fact that the responsibility for air production is still efficiently dispersed will grow far less important.

There are obstacles to both the LaGuardia and the Lovett-Corcoran solutions of the air problem, for neither LaGuardia, nor Corcoran can be brought into the Government until jobs are created for them, and Corcoran has a lingering objection to remaining in Washington. There are also obvious points in favor of both solutions. Finally, there is a third possible solution, by which LaGuardia would be given the same task as the British air production minister, while Lovett and Corcoran divided the British air minister's vital duties. The main thing is, however, that the air problem is at last to be squarely tackled in one way or another, unless one of the usual bureaucratic battles intervenes.

Bombs Boost Morale

By John Cowles

Copyright, 1941, Minneapolis Star Journal Co.

The British are suffering frightfully today from the German "blitz" bombing attacks, but anybody who thinks they would consider making a compromise peace is mistaken.

COWLES

The United Kingdom is a completely unified nation, and the people are single-mindedly determined on two things:

To beat off the German raiders when they come.

Then, regardless of the cost, to destroy utterly the menace of Hitlerism.

The morale of the British people is indescribably high.

Even the millions who, through German bombing, have lost their homes and their pitifully few worldly possessions, show absolutely no sign of weakening.

Eight hundred thousand men, women and children in London alone spend every night in underground public shelter—subway stations, tunnels, cavernous basements. They are packed in these refuges like cattle in a stock car, with inadequate sanitary facilities and with enough narrow, three-tiered bunks for only part of them.

But they are cheerful and uncomplaining, determined that they are going to defeat the Nazis.

In addition to those who go at night to public shelters, millions more sleep in their own basements or in private or neighborhood air raid shelters.

Every successive night "blitz"—those indescribable bombings in which German planes come over by hundreds and drop their tons of high explosives and incendiary bombs on a city—seems to intensify the British resolution to beat Hitler. Just as people in the United States take a community pride in having the best baseball team or the finest parks, the people in each British city boast their town has been more heavily blitzed than any other, and that their people have withstood the punishment more hardily than the residents of any other city.

In Coventry 51,000 homes or flats were destroyed or damaged, out of a total of 67,000 dwelling units in the city, but although three-fourths of the living quarters of the city suffered, only 1,100 persons were killed or died of wounds.

The people go right on about their business now when a daytime raid is on, unless it is abnormally severe.

One rapidly grows accustomed to the popping of antiaircraft guns, as wave after wave passes over invisible in the fog, causes little concern.

Most of the people have acquired a completely fatalistic philosophy: The chance is infinitesimally small that any one individual will be hit—so why worry?

The first day we were in London, a relatively light raid continued through most of the day. The antiaircraft guns kept firing away through the fog, and we learned later there had been bombing casualties in 13 boroughs of London.

But we sat in Parliament listening to a calm discussion of the freedom of the press in wartime. The House of Commons paid no attention to what was going on in the murky skies somewhere overhead—even though the parliament buildings had been hit and damaged in previous raids.

Originally the German air raids reduced British production because workers went to the shelters whenever the sirens sounded warning alarms. But today the blitzes, unless they are extremely heavy, are almost completely ignored by factory workers and by the public.

Before going to England, I had assumed that British industrial production of planes, munitions, etc.—must be suffering severely under the blitz attacks.

I FOUND THAT ACTUALLY BRITISH ARMAMENT PRODUCTION IS STEADILY MOUNTING.

What's America Like Today?

DUNCAN AIKMAN

"Life is hopeless," cry people on one continent. "Life is hard," sigh people on another. "While there's life, there's hope!" is the American reaction. So reports Duncan Aikman, who toured Europe and Latin America, and who now returns from a trip around the United States to tell us what this country is really like today—its attitude toward the war, toward social problems, toward the future, toward preparedness.

Odd Jobs

Pyrheliometer Labors for Beet Farmers

BEET farmers in the Midwest don't realize it, but the success of their crops depends partly on a Washington scientist, Dr. Edward W. Engel, American University professor who operates a solar radiation machine for the Weather Bureau.

The contraption, known as a "pyrheliometer," measures the intensity of the sun's radiation, from which the bureau makes its long-range weather forecasts. And accurate forecasts are important in beet farming, among other things.

The only such apparatus in this part of the country, it consists of a $300 "fish bowl" on the roof of a university building to catch the sun's rays, and a $500 recording gadget in Engel's office which measures the intensity and the warmth of the rays.

Dr. Engel and apparatus

DR. ENGEL'S job is to adjust the electrically operated recording needle three or four times daily for accuracy, keep charts on the day-to-day variations in the radiation and to compute statistics for the Weather Bureau.

His computations involve a mathematical formula that would bring joy to the heart of Einstein. Every four weeks they are sent in to the Weather Bureau to be published in the Weather Journal.

Recordings from the radiation machine are used to predict crop prospects in certain areas. And the data is used by meteorological, biological, agricultural, engineering and medical associations.

THE American University machine has been functioning for 26 years now, but was operated by the Weather Bureau until last fall. It is one of 19 stations in the United States, and the only one in the Middle East.

Dr. Engel is an expert on physical chemistry and last year perfected apparatus for the measurement of "latent heats of vaporization"—a sort of super-thermometer.

In 1931, after he had received his Ph.D. from Princeton University, he served as special expert in physical chemistry for the National Institute of Health. And now, besides operating the radiation machine and teaching advanced chemistry, he is serving as acting president of the university.

Ballerina's Design for Life Needs Dream Man Nine Years Hence

By Robert De Vore

IN the "very prime" of her artistry, when in all the world there shall be no better dancer than she, Tamara Toumanova, prima ballerina of the Original Ballet Russe, is going to quit and get married.

At least, that's what she predicted yesterday.

She has the pattern of what she calls her "second life" all worked out. In the best suite in the Raleigh Hotel the 21-year-old girl with jet hair and wise brown eyes laid out for reporters her pattern for living, loving and marrying, a design fashioned from fabrics picked up in 12 years of dancing through half the countries of the world.

Tamara Toumanova has been a career girl since she was 9, so she speaks like a woman in the teatime of life.

"First I have my career, right now," she said. "And then, when I am in the very prime of my art, I am finished. I am about 30 years old and I begin the new life, the life of a woman with a husband she loves."

SHE has it all worked out on an actuarial basis, but when she dreams through her Pullman window at cozy and beautiful homes from Massachusetts through Maryland, she says it is time to remember that not all actuaries are infallible.

And when she gives you the dimensions of her dream man—"so sensitive he knows without asking why I am sad and what makes me happy . . . handsome outside and beautiful inside"—one wonders if he can be found in nine years. But for Tamara's dream man, there should be no difficulties. Her beauty matches wisdom, and her eyelashes are as long as the artificial ones chorus girls wear.

Her figure is as trim as a boxer's, and that goes for her legs which don't have that affliction dancers know as "fullback calves."

The moderation of Tamara's leg muscles starts with the very first dancing lessons, she explained, and has very much to do with keeping the knee stiff and standing on your toes with the widest possible arch of ankle and foot. This is to help the development of lower leg muscles.

TAMARA talked a lot about dancing shoes. She showed how the shoes must be put on perfectly straight with the drawstring pulled as tightly as possible and the heel stuck fast with an evil-smelling glue. She was emphatic about how the ankle ribbons should be tied almost like tape on the legs of a halfback, but so very neatly with the knot hidden in back.

"A dancer must always appear before her audience perfect in all details," she said.

TAMARA was born on a railroad train in Siberia while her father and mother, white Russians, were fleeing the revolution. She was 6 when she began studying for the ballet. She made her first professional appearance a year later, but she dates the start of her career from the day she was starred at the Paris Opera in a special ballet written for her.

The name, Toumanova, is taken from Tamara's mother, who was Princess Toumanova in Tiflis, Georgia, during the Czarist regime.

With Marina Svetlova and Tatiana Leskova, Tamara and the company will appear in two joint performances with the National Symphony Orchestra tonight and tomorrow night at 8:45 o'clock in Constitution Hall.

Tamara has danced in the principal cities of Europe, Australia and North America, and now she's scheduled for appearances in Mexico and South America. She used to hate constant travel but now loves it because she sees so many kinds of houses.

SHE doesn't think much of American girls. She thinks they're "very pretty, but they are very light."

Then she filled in the details of her program for the "second life."

"I think, as I started so early on my career that I shall go on for a few years more giving more pleasure to my audiences and receiving pleasure from them when I know that they are pleased. Then when I have become so much better than I am now that my audience will see that I am absolutely wonderful, I shall stop and get married.

"For how could it be otherwise?" she asks. "What would my husband think if when he asked me to go somewhere with him, I should have to say 'It is time for my rehearsal' or 'I have to take a lesson today.'"

"I want to be married to my husband. My mother has sacrificed her life for me. That is enough sacrifice for one family.

"I have given my life to my work, I never go out to parties and there are many things I would like to do. I would like to sit home and read, go out to a museum and, yes, I very much want to go to the theater, buy a ticket and sit in the audience.

"When I retire, I will still be young with plenty of time for everything."

Tamara shares the "Kirsten Flagstad suite" at the Raleigh with her mother and best friend, Moura, a 6-year-old Persian cat. She brought with her a medal, decoration of the Harvard Advocate bestowed at Cambridge last week she drank Coca Colas with Harvard University.

In London she thought she had found her dream man, but he didn't quite measure up. In Hawaii, she thought she had found her dream house "high in the hills," but that was before she returned to America nine months later.

"There is nothing like America. I would build anywhere in America."

United Artists Uncorks Its Spring Enthusiasms

Likely List of Pictures Booked by Loew's; Post's Blood Bank Benefit Promises Ace Bill; This, That and the Other About the Theater

SO UNITED ARTISTS takes its turn at bragging.

Having put their bulging brows together in contemplation of United Artists' forthcoming contributions to the celluloid preoccupations of the nearby nations, Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Fred Rohrs, Washington manager for U. A., are pretty complacent about the whole thing.

BELL

They look forward in slap-happy security to the imminent engagement of "So Ends Our Night," as the successor to "The Philadelphia Story," on the screen at Loew's Palace. This is the number about which we have chortled until we are blue in the face—although capillary rupture may have had something to do with it. It is in this one that you will discover the youthful Glenn Ford in a photographic dead-heat with Freddie March, Maggie Sullavan and Frances Dee for the nod of the judges. As the first of the European refugee stories and the first production of David L. Loew and Albert Lewin for United Artists, we should say—and already have said—that it can't miss.

With almost equal enthusiasm we have stuck our neck out in huzzas for our old friend Dick Rowland's production of "Cheers for Miss Bishop," not too far around the corner of Thirteenth and F Streets. Here it is that Martha Scott achieves a triumph in the title role which, according to flimsy report, Bette Davis refused to attempt because she could not find it among her ample resources, as one of the cinema's foremost actresses, to "feel 70-odd years old before the cameras." Miss Scott approached the task with no such trepidation and has one of the year's most notable achievements to her credit as a result.

Had circumstances granted us the privilege of meeting Gabriel Pascal on his recent visit to Washington, we probably would know much more than we do—which is practically nothing—about the forthcoming picturization of "Major Barbara," conspicuous among the Loew bookings of United Artists' impending features. This is a matter originally concocted for the stage by a besilvered Britisher by the name of George Bernard Shaw. Since Mr. Pascal did so well with "Pygmalion," it may be anticipated that he has engineered a comparable coup in translating "Major Barbara" into a medium that Shaw long has pretended to abhor—especially since Wendy Hiller and Rex Harrison are cast in the costellar roles.

Then there is that fellow Lubitsch, the man with the "touch." United Artists is coming along soon with his "That Uncertain Feeling," with Merle Oberon, Melvyn Douglas and Burgess Meredith in the pivotal roles. It is said by those who have seen it, in short-takes or rough-cut rushes, that in this subject Herr Lubitsch continues to be very, very funny in his juggling of the haphazard hilarities of connubial conniptions.

Jimmy Stewart, Paulette Goddard and Horace Heidt's Orchestra, in "Pot o' Gold;" "New Wine"—another flagon, Higginbotham—with Ilona Massey, Binnie Barnes and Alan Curtis, and "Topper Returns," with Joan Blondell and Roland Young, complete the United Artists spring releases that are causing Mr. Barron such Rohrs of delight.

It is possible that some time or other somebody near and dear to you might need an extra red corpuscle or two in a time of physical emergency. It therefore becomes important that through the cooperation of Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers, a special matutinal matinee will be presented in the Tivoli Theater on Saturday morning, March 1, for the benefit of The Washington Post's Blood Bank Fund for Children's Hospital. This extra-curricular performance will by at 10 a. m., and special prices will prevail. Admission for children will be a meager 15 cents and for adults only 25 cents. The major feature of the bill will be a new Hopalong Cassidy subject, starring "Bill" Boyd, "In Old Colorado," shown for the first time on any Washington screen. Two Walt Disney cartoons and a Merrie Melodie short subject will complete the bill. A very elegant program for a supremely worthy cause.

If you missed "The Baker's Wife" during its long run at the Little, there is still time to see it, at Sidney Lust's Bethesda Theater, today and tomorrow. With Raimu in the stellar role, it is worth the trek out Sixteenth Street and the East-West Highway—or however you get there from where you are.

That constant threat to the Booths, the Barretts and the Corse Paytons, Arch McDonald, of the WJSV McDonalds, will be caught at it again on Thursday and Friday nights of this week, when he and the Cross Roads Theater Company will move into the Arlington Theater, Arlington, Va., for two repeats of George Kelly's "The Show Off." Safe on second—probably by an error!

Coe-Defendant-to-the-Bar Note.

Our renegade right arm, Mr. Dick Coe, by now, should be sopping up whatever kind of weather it is they are having in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., with two weeks of rustingcating still ahead of him—the venomous so-and-so!

So Go Ahead, Mister, and Pull the Trigger!

JEFFREY LYNN AND THOMAS MITCHELL

in the Warner Brothers item now known as "Flight from Destiny," originally celebrated under the title of "Invitation to a Murder," which this ominous incident seems much better to illustrate. "Flight from Destiny" will be coming along to the local Warner screens in a week or so now, and promises tense entertainment, with Geraldine Fitzgerald in the foremost feminine role

Diversified Bill Gets the Nod At Trans-Lux

With Haile Selassie flying back to his homeland and the British capturing the airdome of El Adem in Libya, the news section of the new program at the Trans-Lux Theater is wide in its scope and thrilling in its details. The Japanese again are shown showering lead upon the Chinese in the form of machine gun bullets and deadly bombs. From the British angle, we get a glimpse of the new corvette, a quickly built sub-chaser that is already reducing the sinking of British tonnage. There are splendid pictures of the meeting between Wendell Willkie and King George, though the censor cut out the sound. In the Bahamas we find the Duke and Duchess of Windsor inspecting a charity fair, as Queen Elizabeth, in London, inspects the thousands of clothing gifts from the United States.

The war refugee problem in all its horrors is brought to us, together with a solution which the Dominican Republic believes will work. At Annapolis, the first Naval Reserve class is graduated under the defence act.

Sports and Shorts

In the world of sports there is coverage from the speeding bobsledders, at Lake Placid, N. Y., to an underwater show in Florida. For baseball fans, the training school is under way at Hot Springs, Ark., DiMaggio is in training at San Francisco and the Dodgers at Havana.

In the short films everyone will enjoy the "Washington Parade" presentation, a splendid picture for the holiday week, of the United States Military Academy at West Point. The picture shows the cadet grind from beginning to graduation.

"Unusual Crafts" takes you for a visit to the Scilly Isles, off the coast of England. "Hunting On Top Of The World" shows daring Norse seamen in quest of seal and polar bear in a violent storm.

"The Mouse Trappers" is the title of an Andy Panda cartoon, and a dandy, in Technicolor.

Goes West

Jackie Cooper's new proficiency at riding and roping has persuaded Paramount to schedule one of his future Aldrich Family pictures, of which "The Aldrich Family in Life With Henry" is current, as a Western to be titled "Two-Gun Henry."

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 23.

ILLUSTRATED SECTION: Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt accompanied Count and Countess Kotzebue to the Casino Russe week. They sat with a group of other guests, including Fannie Hurst and the Grand Duchess Marie, at a large table. One of the news photographers listened to his comrades discussing the possibilities of photographing the dowager Vanderbilt. "I'll settle it now," he announced, approached the table and took his picture . . . Mrs. Vanderbilt objected and started to leave. "I didn't photograph the whole table," the photographer assured her, "just the other end—just that part, not the whole thing" . . . "Yes," said Mrs. Vanderbilt as she left. "You mean just like Mr. Hitler didn't take the whole of Czecho-Slovakia."

MOVIES DEPT.: Pierre Fresnay, the French star who last appeared on Broadway in "Noah," was offered a job in Hollywood at a fabulous salary. Fresnay was willing to accept only on condition that his wife, Yvonne Printemps, also appear in the picture. The film company, however, refused to sign the lady—and so the negotiations fell through . . . "Pierre, you should've taken the offer," Fresnay was told. "After all, you have no money now" . . . "Well," the star shrugged, I've always loved beyond my means."

PERSONALS: Gertrude Lawrence was one of the thousands who accepted the Nazi invitation to wire, collect, a message to Adolf Hitler . . . Miss Lawrence's message was "WISH YOU WERE HERE."

DANCE DEPT.: Backstage at the Broadway Theater an usher discovered a man in white slacks swinging from the 50-foot ladder which is used for repairing the equipment for "Fantasia." He rushed to the front office and reported his discovery . . . He was assured that permission had been granted. For the man was Anton Dolin, star of the Ballet Theater, preparing his version of the Stravinsky ballet, "Sportasia." He was practicing trapeze antics there, to the Fantasound presentation of the movie sequence wherein the Philadelphia Symphony's 103 pieces play Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring."

SOCIAL NOTES: Two bearded all-nighters sat at the Cafe Royal on Second Avenue lamenting the fate of the world . . . "Ah, life," said the first, pointing to the liquid in front of him. "Life is like a glass of tea" . . . "Like a glass of tea?" repeated the second. "And why?" . . . 'How should I know?' confessed the first, "I'm not a philosopher."

SCHOOL DEPT.: Will Bradley, the band leader, played at the Georgia Tech prom and was invited to address the student jitterbugs. He was followed on the platform by a member of the faculty, who lectured the students about the new opportunities in the world and warned the young listeners about wasting time. "As I entered this room today," he stated, "I saw a four-letter word some one put on the door. I think it sums up all that I have said. It's a real four-letter word, but it describes perfectly all the many things of which I want to make you aware." He sat down, while the students craned their necks. There was only one word on that door—the four-letter word "PULL."

TRAVEL DEPT.: During the inaugural the Golden Gate Quartette—who entertain at Cafe Society Uptown—were invited by Mrs. Roosevelt to sing at Constitution Hall, where Marian Anderson once had been banned. Last week the quartette returned to Washington to sing at a White House function. Rather than be confronted with Washington's prejudices they hired a large New York taxicab to drive them to Washington and around the Capitol and then back to New York . . . Incidentally, they brought their white ties and tails for the White House party. They had to return to their hotel and don street wear—for they learned that the reception was an informal one.

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: G. Huntington Hartford, who invested $100,000 of his $20,000,000 inheritance in PM and became a reporter for that newspaper, no longer is employed there. He resigned to write a book . . . Before he resigned Hartford was assigned by Ralph Ingersoll to a story on Long Island. The young A. and P. heir took the shortest route—using the 40-foot boat he owned. After he covered the story Hartford's boat returned him to the floating dock at the foot of Wall Street and then continued up the East River. He was 40 minues late in returning to his office. He had forgotten that the dock is a long distance offshore—and that he needed a rowboat to land. And so for 40 minutes he waited at that spot atop the waters of the East River flagging all boats to hitch-hike a ride to shore.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 23.

Bob Porterfield, who originated the Barter Theater in Abingdon, Va., came out to do a series of lectures. He's house-guesting with Jeffrey Lynn, who was telling him about the picture "Sergeant York." Bob, in his Southern drawl, said, "You mean that York fellow from Tennessee? Well, I know all about him—I ought to be in that." And in less than 24 hours he WAS—with time out to fill his lecture dates, too.

HOPPER

He told me that eight years ago, soon after the Barter Theater opened, a sow was brought to him by the father of a large family to pay their admissions for the season. Well, that was the year we were "plowing everything under" but Bob, being poor, disobeyed the law, kept the pig, and from it has gotten enough hams to pay for all the plays he's produced since. As you know, he pays the authors' royalties with Virginia hams.

Last year Bob chose Laurette Taylor for her performance in "Outward Bound" as the best actress of the year, and somebody suggested he get Mrs. Roosevelt to make the presentation speech. He invited her, and was he surprised when she accepted! He knew he'd have to get a lot of people together, and thought the best thing would be to give a luncheon. An engagement was made for him to speak before a group of prominent women.

He went to the address, got off at the wrong floor, a woman standing in the doorway rushed him inside and said, "Oh, you're late!" And not until he'd talked half an hour and another speaker arrived did he realize he was in the wrong apartment. But by this time, the women belonging to the Vanderbilts, Astors, and Whitneys, were so intrigued the entire group bought tickets for his luncheon when he told them he had Mrs. Roosevelt on hand and didn't know what to do for her.

It's come to light that David Selznick, to help his star, Ingrid Bergman, and his friend, Producer Bob Sherwood, supervised the cutting on Bob's first independent picture, "Adam Had Four Sons." That's the spirit—let's have more of it.

You've got to hand it to Walter Wanger for getting President Roosevelt to speak over the air for our Academy Award dinner program. He'll also have as guests, Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and Noel Coward. Walter's continuing the principles that Douglas Fairbanks started when the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was born—which some here in town have lost track of.

Walter's also arranged for the Town Hall of the Air to come from Hollywood the same night as the dinner, with Roz Russell, Donald Ogden Stewart and Manchester Boddy taking part—all of which will build our industry on a firmer foundation.

Mrs. Edna Gladney, whose story Greer Garson is doing in "Blossoms in the Dust," was taken ill. When Mervyn LeRoy heard of it, he sent some scenes of Greer from the picture, and arranged to have a projection machine there so she could see it in her own room. Said she, "If anything can pull me out of this, that will."

Benny Rubin is enjoying his third working day in pictures in five years. Yet he was so good in "Lucky Partners" in a bit that he got special mention by our finest critics. Another man who's had a similar experience is Julius Tannen, who's been a star for lo these many years. It's just too bad when men like these can't get a job in Hollywood—must prove all the politicians aren't in Washington.

I saw a little scene on the set of "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America" the other day that you won't see in the picture. Script called for May Robson to dance a waltz with Jeffrey Lynn at Priscilla Lane's coming out party, so she whispered in his ear, "Come on, Jeff, let's show 'em"—and they glided over the floor in as smooth a waltz as you could wish to see. Director Bernhardt yelled, "Cut. Print it."

Extras stopped dancing, but not Jeff and May. They kept right on and after a second or two, the orchestra started playing again for them. May said, when they finally finished, "I haven't enjoyed a waltz so much since the summer of '98!

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 23 (INS).—Hold everything! Who do you think is testing for the Alexander Woollcott role in "The Man Who Came to Dinner?" Charles Laughton, no less! Laughton and Eddie Goulding, who is set to direct the popular Moss Hart-George Kaufman play, worked all today studying the script and then Laughton went to the studio and had a series of tests made. So I think it is fairly certain that the English actor will get the coveted role which Alexander Woollcott played here, Clifford Webb in Chicago and Monty Woolley created in New York.

PARSONS

At one time I would have said Charles is too typically English to do a Woollcott, but having seen him as the Italian grape grower in "They Knew What They Wanted," well, I don't think there is any role that the big boy cannot play.

Time somebody gave Marie Wilson a break. The former little movie dumbbell turned in a red hot performance as a glamour girl in "Virginia" and then, for no reason, nothing happend for months. Marie, discouraged, was all set to go out on another personal appearance tour when Republic stepped in and handed her the part of a tough, sassy girl in "Rookies on Parade." This is the draft musical in which Bob Crosby and Ruth Terry are the romantic leads and Gertie Niesen furnishes the torch songs.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Lydell Peck, once wed to Janet Gaynor, is engaged to Ruth Marie Laumeister, Sacramento socialite. They will wed in the spring; Bill Cagney (James' brother) has finally made a date to have his appendix out at the Queen of the Angels Hospital; Alice Faye, dining in the Valley with Jack Oakie and Venita, his bride. The Valleyites are all saying the rain isn't bad even though at one time you could row a boat through the main street of Reseda—but it's a good spirit and just to prove it I am going to try wading to Marsons farm on Sunday.

Bob Taplinger's cocktail party for Quentin Reynolds proves how well these bachelors can entertain without the aid of a woman's touch. It was such a nice party that everyone stayed on and on. I was amazed how young Gene Tunney looks. He and his wife were the center of attraction. Mrs. Jack Warner, who can wear those trick hats like no one else, wore an especially smart one. Never saw so many pretty girls at one party. Peggy Diggins, Virginia Field, Katherine Aldridge, Georgia Carroll, Rita Hayworth are all real beauties. Mrs. Danny Danker and Mrs. Jules Stein, Mrs. Pat O'Brien, Mrs. Charles Feldman were among the smartest women there:

When Academy Award time comes around Bob Hope, Jack Benny and Eddie Cantor should receive some recognition for the many benefits they have given. The boys

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Gayety

Patricia Perry, one of the most popular sirens on the circuit and a personality who possesses the best singing voice among her stage sisters, is the featured attraction at the Gayety this week.

While Patricia is a real eyeful and wears some unusually pretty gowns, her talents are better expressed in song. She has as sweet a voice as we've ever heard, and it is to be hoped that she will enlarge her repertoire of songs on this or future visits.

Benny "Wop" Moore and Slate Taylor, two veteran funsters, headline the comedy sector. Both lads have a wealth of material and present many amusing comedy skits. Ermaine Parker, a fine "talking woman," and handsome Jack Lamont prove valuable assets to the antics' lighter moments.

Aside from the comely Miss Perry, the distaff portion of the program offers such stunning personalities as Dawn Delees and Elsa Lang. Miss Lang's sweet voice is heard to advantage in many of the colorful ballet numbers.

Two highlights on a fine bill are provided by the Burns Brothers and Pryde and Dell. The former give a nifty exhibition of soft shoes dancing, while the latter, a boy and a girl, rate among the best entertainers who have appeared here lately.

The chorus is youthful and full of sizz, and the settings and lighting effects are a credit to Manager Ferber's production department.

ART JOHN.

Martins, Davies, Goulds Among Dinner Hosts

Sunday Evening Parties Lure Many Of Diplomatic and Congressional Set; South American Motif Pervades Two Fetes

Last night was a "dinner evening" for members of Capital society. Among the hosts were the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies, and Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould.

The Martins gathering was somewhat an innovation in such affairs, though such parties are (or rather were) common in Europe. The hosts asked their friends to come in at 7 for a round of bridge in the large drawing room. Dinner followed at 8:30.

Guests of the Martins were the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Atherton, Paul Van Zeeland, Baroness de Gruben, wife of the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock and the Marquis de la Fontaine.

The Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Feryre y Santander, was the ranking guest at the Davies' dinner, and Mrs. Gould's party followed a South American pattern. She entertained for Dr. and Senhora Decio de Paulo Machado of Brazil, who have been staying in New York at the Ritz. She invited many from the Latin American diplomatic corps to meet them, and the decorations followed the national colors of Brazil—green and yellow.

Besides Senor Freyre, Mr. and Mrs. Davies' guests included Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Judge Richard S. Whaley, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Rufus Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Moorhead Patterson and Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming.

Machados Own Plantations

Both Senhor and Senhora de Machado own banana plantations, and the former built one of the first big apartment houses in South America. They are here for a time to see life in Washington and are staying at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Gould had assembled all of the flags of the American republics to give the right touch to her party. They were placed on a table in the hall, beneath a mirror, and from the table streamed green smilax, gladioli of this shade and golden jonquils, centered the table, and were flanked by tapers in silver candlelabra, and flags of the republics.

Even the ice cream served was in the shape of the Brazilian national flower, the orchid, and was tinted green and white. Several hot dishes, as well as cold meats and salads featured the menu. The party was held in the house which Mrs. Gould leases from Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies, on Massachusetts avenue. The hostess wore a dinner dress of black, with a peach-colored bodice extending into a fan shape on the flared skirt.

Among the guests were the Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy and Senhora de Konder, the Chilean Counselor and Senora de Gazitua, the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron, Dr. Gabriel Turbay, Colombian Ambassodor, the Nicaraguan envoy and Senora de De Bayle, the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Molekamp, Randall Reid-Adam of the British Embassy, and several others from the diplomatic corps.

Senators Among Guests

Justice Frank Murphy dropped by, and others from the official set included Senator and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Senator David Walsh, Senator Arthur Capper and Senator George Radcliffe.

Also in the party were Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose and Mrs. Henry Flood.

Mrs. Edward Logan, of Boston, who is visiting Mrs. Gould also was present. The latter has spent a lot of time in Cuba and has been in most of the South American countries. Senhora de Machado arrived by plane from New York yesterday just in time for the supper, which was served buffet style.

Hatches Give Tea in Virginia

Many Washingtonians, including the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch, motored out to Virginia for a party yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Hatch are spending the winter in town at 1911 R Street, but decided it would be fun to go to their home near Burke for the day, and gathered in a few friends for tea.

The party was in the nature of a pre-birthday celebration in honor of Mrs. Irene Caldwell, who will observe her birthday in a few days.

Among those present were Representative and Mrs. Luther A. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jones, Mr. and Mrs. A. Smith Bowman, Justice and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clephane, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs, Mrs. Bruce Smith (Mr. Smith is in London), and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warner.

Kolar Dinner Honors Rep. and Mrs. Sabath

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Kolar entertained a company of 16 at dinner at their apartment in the Alban Towers last evening in honor of Repreeentative and Mrs. A. J. Sabath, of Chicago, and the latter's niece, Miss Pearl Pribyl, also of Chicago, who is visiting here.

Several other guests from Chicago and New York were in the company.

Mrs. McLean Entertains 70 At Friendship

Mrs. Edward Beale McLean was hostess last night at another in the series of Sunday night dinners she is giving this season. There were about 70 guests gathered at Friendship. They were seated at several tables centered with tall standards of spring flowers, and later adjourned to the sunporch to see the showing of the new film, "Western Union."

Justice Frank Murphy, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed and the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil were ranking members of the company. Others were Senator and Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Joseph Guffey and his sister, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Representative and Mrs. Martin Dies former Senator Henry Ashurst, the Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George T. Pettingill, former Representative and Mrs. John Dempsey and the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold.

Mrs. Gordon, Now in Key West, Entertains Group

Mrs. George Gordon, wife of the former United States Minister to the Netherlands, is in Key West, Fla., for a vacation. She entertained at cocktails at the Casa Marina there earlier in the week.

Among her guests were Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins, of Washington, who are also sojourning there; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Reeves, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. John H. Packard 3d, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Randolph Snowden, of Philadelphia, Alexander Benson and Mr. and Mrs. Rene Leon, of Princeton, N. J., and William E. Sturges, jr., of Washington.

Another recent arrival at Key West is Mrs. Mary B. Linkins, of Washington.

Texas Club Here Plans Dance on Friday

The Texas clubs of Washington will hold a dance on Friday evening at the Shoreham. Several hundred are expected to attend.

The dance is held each year as near March 2 as possible, for that is the anniversary of the independence of Texas.

Gannons in Capital

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Sinclair Gannon, of Long Beach, Calif., are visiting Washington and are at the Wardman Park.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

FRENCH IS still the language of diplomats and some of the best French spoken in Washington is to be heard at the Greek Legation. Lunching informally the other day with the Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos, one of the guests remarked to his neighbor that French as spoken by our hostess, was the Fench of the classics. Fortunately for all of us no one even attempted to speak Greek, classical or otherwise.

Mme. Diamantopoulos has turned the third floor of the legation into a workroom where ladies of the Greek colony in Washington gather to make articles for the Red Cross. "Not everything we make goes to Greece," she said, "but it is all put to good use."

At luncheon that day Mme. Depasta, distinguished looking wife of the Greek Minister-Counselor, was wearing a smart blue and white Greek emblem on her simple black frock. In answer to questions she said that similar brooches were sold for Greek war relief either at the British War relief headquarters or, opening her handbag, "right here." Whereupon Mme. Depasta drew out another brooch, a little, kilted, Greek Evzone in blue and white enamel on gold, which was instantly snapped up by one of the guests. Refusing all thanks, the purchaser said that she is making a collection of patriotic costume jewelry which, she believes, will be of great interest in the future.

ALSO lunching with the Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Swift—he is high up in the Red Cross—the attache of the Yugoslav Legation, Bogdan Raditsa, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alling, of the State Department.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard gave a delightful weekend tea party to introduce to their friends their new home overlooking Rock Creek Park. The hostess was charming in a long, black frock ornamented by a splendid square-cut aquamarine pendant, just the color of her eyes.

Among the Sards' guests were Mrs. Sard's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilmer, who are next door neighbors, and Mme. Procope, who lives just around the corner. Others were Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Morgan, accompanied by her sister, attractive Mrs. Streeter Flynn; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Houghteling, Admiral and Mrs. John Towers, Mrs. Bertram Long in black with a jet-embroidered jacket; Mrs. Arthur Krock in chic brown tweeds, and Mrs. Carlton Holdredge. Also Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, the popular dean of the Diplomatic Corps; Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, the British Naval Attache, Admiral Pott, and pretty Mrs. Pott; Lady Bailey, the former Milly Bromwell, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chetwynd, William P. MacCracken and a number of others.

MR AND MRS. ROBERT PELL were hosts at cocktail time the other day in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Foster Kennedy, of New York, who were passing through the Capital on their way to Havana. The blue tones of the Pells' drawing room made a perfect background for gay spring flowers, yellow mimosa and fresia, and an open fire made one forget the chill out-of-doors.

Among those gathered to meet the Kennedys were the Counselor of the British Embassys and Mrs. Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wales, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bonsal, Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt Parker, and Miss Cornelia Basil of the Foreign Service School of the State Department. Also Walter Lippmann, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan and Robert Coe, Herbert Elliston, Robert Stewart, Samuel Reber and Stephen Morris.

Mrs. Pell is making plans for a trip to Bermuda toward the end of the month to visit her mother, Mrs. Reginald Barker, and her small daughter, Margot, who have been spending the winter there.

Miss Zeisberg Is Engaged

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Zeisberg to Marshall Crapon Gutherie, jr., both of Wilmington, Del. No date has been set for the wedding.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mrs. Frederick C. Zeisberg, of Wilmington, and the late Mr. Zeisberg. The latter was before his death, two years ago, president of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. Miss Zeisberg was graduated from the Tower Hill School in Wilmington and Bennington College.

Mr. Gutherie is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Marshall C. Gutherie, of Chevy Chase, Md. He was graduated from Haverford College and received a graduate degree at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is with the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co. in Wilmington.

Play Judges To Be Entertained

Mrs. Maud Howell Smith will entertain at cocktails today for the three judges chosen for the preliminary contests of the 1941 one act play tournament of the District of Columbia. They are Mrs. Emil Hurja, John M. Kline, jr., actor, and Earl Hague, who recently came here to teach drama and voice.

Others who will be present at the party are Miss Sibyl Baker, director of the Community Center and Playgrounds Department, which sponsors the tourney; J. B. Williams, Mrs. Gertrude Broderick, Mrs. Alfred Brooks, Mrs. Mabelle Cosgrove Clark, Miss Bess Davis Schreiner and L. Zaff Rogers. The tournament opens its preliminary contests Thursday night at Roosevelt Auditorium and will culminate in the finals on March 8.

200 Attend Barayev Reception On Soviet Army Anniversary

To celebrate the twenty-third anniversary of the founding of the Red Army, the Assistant Military Attache of the Soviet Embassy and Mme. Barayev entertained at a reception yesterday afternoon.

American Army officers and their wives and the military attaches of various countries turned up to toast the anniversary in champagne and practically anything else one could ask for. Altogether there were some 200 present.

The party took place at the Barayevs' residence on Garfield Street. The buffet was as lavish as the bar, with salads and cold turkey along with sandwiches. Vanilla ice cream and crushed raspberries completed the menu.

The hosts received at the entrance to the drawing room, Mme. Barayev wearing a floor length gown of black with a bodice of white lace and a shoulder corsage of orchids. Bowls of red carnations and pale pink gladioli were placed in the drawing room and hall.

The Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky were present, as were several members of the embassy staff. Mme. Oumansky wore black, with a hat to match, and a scarf of silver fox.

The German Military Attache and Frau von Boetticher and the Naval Attache and Frau Witthoeft-Emden were present, arriving early and staying late. Frau Witthoeft-Emden wore a green and black printed silk dress and a high crowned black hat with a veil.

The Air Attache of the Italian Embassy and Signora de Gaeta also were guests, as were the Japanese Military Attache and several others from that embassy. Others from the Diplomatic Corps included the Swedish Military Attache and Mme. Wessel and the Assistant Military Attache and Mme. Wennberg. The latter wore a smart ensemble of gray.

Gen. Henry Rutherford was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Dorothy Rutherford. From the Navy came Commander Hamilton Bryan, who has been out of town on frequent business trips of late.

Col. and Mrs. Arthur Harris dropped in for a drink and a bite to eat, and others present included Commander and Mrs. Leslie Stevens and John Ide.

The Wessels will entertain at a cocktail party Sunday in honor of Col. William Shipp, who will leave in a week or two for Belgrade, where he will be Military Attache of our Embassy. He plans to make the trip by ocean liner and then take a train across Europe. Col. Shipp has held various posts abroad in the course of his career with the Army. He also was among the guests yesterday.

The Gentler Sex

—— By Malvina Lindsay

Two-Bag Woman

YOU are just starting out the door when you find you are carrying your black handbag with your brown ensemble. You'll have to run back and change—no, you haven't time! You are due at your appointment downtown in 20 minutes.

Oh, well—maybe nobody will notice. After all, brown and black are supposed to go together this season. Still . . . you really ought to have another black accent to carry out the motif. This way it simply looks as though you didn't have another bag . . . or, worse still, that you didn't know any better. Well, anyway, there's nothing to be done now.

You run for a bus, board it breathlessly, and fumble for your pass while the driver glowers and the passengers all stare fascinated by your dilemma. You fish out library card . . . bank book . . . stamp book . . . a ticket to a church supper . . . matinee ticket stubs . . . a photograph coupon . . . the card a department store saleswoman gave you when you promised to return . . . the card of a corset representative . . . a card giving you a chance in a raffle . . . a dog-eared calling card. But no bus pass. Finally, in desperation, you draw out a dime and put it in the money box.

In your seat you reassort the contents of your bag, notice that the little flap at the side is empty. Ah, you remember! You didn't transfer the contents of the side flap yesterday when you changed to your black bag for the cocktail party.

Someone sits down beside you. "I saw you get on," says your impeccable neighbor, Mrs. Killdash.

"Oh, y-y-yes!" you stutter, and launch into a fumbling account of how you happened to be carrying your "old black bag."

You walk along downtown streets feeling the eyes of all you pass upon you. You enter a department store waiting room.—feel a mass gaze of appraisal and scorn. At the counters even the clerks seem to treat you loftily.

"Come, come, this will never do!" you tell yourself. "Making such a fuss over nothing . . . and the world in the shape it is."

You shrug your shoulders and temporarily forget your dilemma in the thrill of buying a bottle of magic hand lotion and a jar of miracle face cream for the price of one at a cosmetic sale. The price is $1.75. You reach in your bag for a couple of bills. There seem to be no bills!

Again the fishing out of content . . . compact . . . handkerchief . . . nail file . . . hairpins . . . mirror . . . pencils . . . pill box, etc Again you remember! You left the bills in your brown bag when you changed for the cocktail party!

It is not a quiet day downtown. You meet all the people you wouldn't want to meet when you were carrying a black bag with a brown outfit . . . swanky friends who have gone up in the world . . . resentful ones who are not as lush as they were and who you feel are bitterly appraising . . . new ones on whom you wish to make an impression.

Well, if you can ever get home you'll stick to one bag in the future. Have just one good basic outfit and one very good bag that will last a lifetime. Why, just think of all the time spent in changing bags! Why, if the hours were laid end to end—wait, what's this?

You find yourself at a bag counter. All the new spring bags in festive colors!! Soft blues, bright reds, greens, lavenders. Say, now . . . a bright red bag . . . with a little hat to match . . . might do a lot to liven up your black winter outfit!

The Mannish Mode

Unless your suit coat is 25 or 26 inches in length, it will look dated this spring. Going hand in hand with the longer look is the loose mannish cut of coats. If you are wearing last year's model, better think twice—just measure the jacket to be assured of the difference this year. Bearing out the new cut and fit is this loose hanging "Really Red" Keniston tweed suit. It's just the suit for travel by air, for spectator sports, or just casual wear in city and country

Learn to Dance Tango at Home

LIGHTS, music, smart young people dancing!

A man who treats a girl to such an evening naturally feels cheated if she's not up on her steps, if she must sit like a stick while others glide glamorously along in the tango. "Next time we'll go to the corner drugstore," he thinks!

But it's a different story if you've taught yourself the fashionable steps at home, if you can follow easily through the trickiest variations. You're a favorite, then for "glamour" dates!

With diagrams and directions showing you how, you can soon be an expert dancer. In dancing the tango, be careful not to move unnecessarily above the waist. Take your steps in precise panther-like fashion. Now try for yourself the simple Tango Three-Step.

Easily, too, you can learn the rumba and Conga, their subtle hip motion! As you step, just sway hips toward the side of the foot receiving weight—that's all there is to it. And, when you know clever variations like the Rumba Turn and Conga Rock, you'll be the star performer of your crowd.

Have Your Fun, Forget Dignity; Foil Old Age

By Ida Jean Kain

FOR PROOF that the average person of 30 or thereabouts gives up all thought of participation in sports and turns into a bystander no statistics are needed. All that is necessary is to stroll past the Radio City skating rink, where the kibitzers on the sidewalk so far outnumber the performers that it would probably be more lucrative to let the skaters in free and charge a dime to look on.

It is true there is something mesmeric in the sight of a small group of men, women and children waltzing gracefully about on a circle of ice with hustling Manhattan, intent on business, as the backdrop. And I will admit it is not surprising the average spectator feels no particular urge to get out there on the ice and shine.

There is no spot on earth better equipped to give the novice an inferiority complex, as I can tell you. It is practically a star performance, with fancy costumes, professional footwork and an audience that Sonja Henie would appreciate. Anyone who just skates around is certain to feel like a back number.

Ignore Your Dignity

But, unfortunately, this dogged determination not to be conspicuous extends to most sports activities, even where there is no audience, and it isn't healthy. We are too prone to worry about how we look to others and we get to thinking how foolish we'd look if we should fall, and we don't take any chances with our dignity. So we get soft and stodgy looking, and miss a lot of fun in the bargain.

Winter is a grand season for outdoor activity of some kind. If you don't do anything but walk, it's better than at any other time of the year. When the snow is on the ground you exert yourself more and bring more muscles into play. But, of course, you need a pair of low heel shoes with galoshes to match. You'll not only get nowhere, but you risk a wrenched ankle teetering around in high heels in the snow.

Shoveling the snow off your walk can be chalked up as good exercise as well as civic service. And, in your lighter moments, you can always get out and slide down hill—the ride down is exhiliarating, the walk up a good workout for your lazy muscles.

No Age Limit on Fun

If you are in fair condition it may not be "too late" for you to learn to skate or ski. Let me put it on record that I did see one impressive gentleman of 50—evidently a banker or successful broker—taking lessons at Radio City. He was doing all right. What's more, he seemed to be having fun. At the ski schools they tell me there is no age ilmit—that the women of 40 and over catch on quickly once they get their muscles into condition.

So don't give in too much to your dignity. If you do, you will grow older than necessary faster.

Widowed When Her Son, an Only Child, Was 5, Mother Tells, for Benefit of 'Mrs. U. D.,' How She Managed to Give Him Well-Rounded Home Life

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Mrs. U. D.," in last Wednesday's column, about her 14-year-old son's failing marks in school, despite his high I. Q., prompts me to write to you. Perhaps my own experiences, as the widowed mother of an only son, will help to underline your belief that her boy "needs to come under the influence of some understanding, sympathetic, inspiring masculine aegis."

Like Mrs. U. D., I was widowed when my only son was not yet five. Although only 29 at the time of his death, my husband was the head of a department in a large Midwestern university. His son gave every promise of having inherited his brilliant father's potentialities. My greatest problem became: How can the boy now continue to develop normally, in order to fulfill his splendid promise? Related to this problem was a question of how to insure a living for the two of us. My husband had left a small insurance,—which, however, was pretty well spent by the time the costs of his illness and burial had been met, and I had paid for a serious operation and hospital stay that fell to my lot two months after his death.

I knew just enough about human psychology to realize it is very difficult for a bereaved young mother not to center her emotional life upon her child's. Therefore, I determined, almost at once, that no matter how hard it might be for me, the best thing I could do for the boy was to get away from him,—at least for a time,—until I had recovered from the shock of his father's death.

Fortunately, my parents were still living and willing to take my son into their home. They live on the outskirts of a small town in a Midwestern State, where they had a cow, chickens and ample garden, although not much money. And they were to have less in the next few years, as my father lost his modest job the same month my husband died. So did my brother, who then brought his wife—who was expecting a baby—to live with my parents. The national depression was beginning to take its toll. Later, as matters got worse, I had to abandon my plans for taking a doctor's degree in order to earn a living for all of us—but I managed to accomplish two years of graduate study at a Western university before this point was reached.

Despite the hardships in his grandparents' home, my son had a normal environment. My mother took my place in his life very satisfactorily, and my father and brother gave him masculine society. There was enough good, wholesome food; plenty of space to play and not less than 20 neighborhood youngsters for playmates. But even though I knew how well off he was, the separation was anguishing for me. There were phychological repercussions on me which, along with the normal pangs of readjustment to a life without my beloved husband, showed up in functional disorders of various sorts. But I did not give in to my longing to have him with me, because I knew I was in no condition to be a good mother to him, much as I loved him.

After two years' groping to "find myself," I decided to seek my fortune in Washington, where I had reason to believe my abilities were marketable, and where many of my husband's friends were located. I planned to bring my son with me. But when I saw how contented he was with my parents, and how he had developed under their care, I didn't have the heart to indulge my mother love at his expense. So I came East without him; and again I suffered agonies of longing.

That was in 1933. The work I undertook sent me into the field, all over the West. Occasionally I managed visits with my son, between cross-country jumps. I brought him to Washington twice on holidays, but it seemed unwise to uproot him from that wholesome environment. He was doing very well in school, and was the talk of the community because he was so smart and at the same time so charming and well-liked by both adults and his contemporaries. It looked as if we might never be privileged to renew a close mother-and-child relationship. And, as adolescence drew near, it seemed more than ever necessary to leave him in a setting which included men—particularly as he was developing such a fine relationship with his grandfather. But, in 1937, Fate took a hand.

For some time, I had been the victim of malicious molestation of the vilest order by the unloved wife of a man with whom I had been professionally associated for three years. In 1936, this man had, in very self protection, to stop living under the same roof with this woman. From then on, her cruel activities increased. She threatened to "get" both her husband and me, and went to great lengths,—without success,—to have us discharged from our jobs.

Finally, it occurred to me that my son's presence might have some protective or "chaperone" value. He was then 11. I discussed the idea with my friends, some of whom had misgivings about his becoming the possible victim of the woman's jealous mania. But, on the whole, they adjudged it proper and desirable to bring him here—even though it meant he would be subjected to preponderantly "female" influencing most of the time. So he came. He made the adjustment to a totally different environment with astonishing ease, and his fine scholastic record continued. He made new friends rapidly.

I feel sure that his success, from that point on, can be traced largely to the wisdom of the hard choice I made in the first days after his father's death. He continues to blossom—but now, other factors are contributing. Last year, I married my former professional associate,—with whom I had ceased working in 1939. There is an old Danish saying, "Nothing is so bad that there isn't some good in it." And that applies to my persecutor's activities. She simply succeeded in driving her former husband into my arms,—much to my surprise and eventual satisfaction.

My boy, now 15, and his new father had become well equainted in the years from 1937 to 1940, and are now inseparable and devoted companions. I watch from the sidelines the development of this healthy man-to-man relationship, knowing that life cheated me out of one whole chapter of kinship with my son—but still I am unutterably grateful that I had the courage, years ago, to take the steps which made this fine new relationship possible for him.

Readers Throw Light On Boy's Difficulty

DEAR E. H. S.: Thank you for your generosity in placing your experience at the disposal, as it were, of "Mrs. U. D."—whose problem, stated in last Wednesday's column, has brought a number of interesting "reader-responses" to my desk. I am hoping in the next few days to find additional space for publication of one or several more such letters—since all serve to throw helpful light on that mother's question of how to aid and inspire her 14-year-old son (who has a high I. Q. and a "failing" report card), to make more satisfactory progress in school.

It's About Time

By Dolores Boland

IT'S ABOUT TIME to realize that it is not smart to wear the latest thing unless it is becoming to you. It is much smarter to stick to flattering lines than it is to be a slave to fashion's whim.

Model Gives Rules for Posture

Hollywood, Calif. — Marguerite Chapman, Junoesque former Powers model recently given a Warner Bros. contract, has promised herself to practice diligently all the exercises for mannequins she learned while modeling clothes in New York City. She considers grace in walk and carriage even more important now that she's launching her screen career. In her own words:

"First, line up your body by standing with your back to a wall so that only the shoulders and base of the spine touch.

"While in this position walk straight across the room, swinging the legs from the hips, not the knees.

"To appear to be walking on air, ankles and arches must be strong. Rise up and down on your toes at least 20 times a day, try picking up playing cards with your toes, or stand balanced on one foot while you slowly swing the other leg back and forth."

Jackson Day Dinner Fee Is Dropped

President Roosevelt will deliver his annual address to Democrats of the country at a Nation-wide series of Jackson Day dinners on March 29, it was announced yesterday by Richard J. Reynolds, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

Departing from the practice of previous Jackson Day dinners, party officials with an eye on the Hatch "clean politics" Act have abandoned the straight $5 to $100 charge for the dinners, with the profits going to the party treasury.

Instead, the Democrats will attend the dinner by invitation. The invitations to the main dinner in Washington, for which $100 previously has been charged, will be extended this year to the men and women who contribute $100 or more—during the campaign which precedes the dinner.

The President will speak in person at the dinner in Washington, at which Oliver A. Quayle, jr., general manager of the national committee will be chairman, and his remarks will be broadcast to the other gatherings throughout the country.

A five-week drive for party funds, beginning today, will culminate in the dinners, goal of the drive being elimination of the party's 1940 campaign deficit and the providing of funds for future operations.

Heretofore the dinners have been held on the anniversary of the Battle of New Orleans, in January, but were postponed this year to avoid interference with arrangements for the Presidential inauguration.

Speakers at dinners outside of Washington will include members of the Cabinet, Senators, Representatives and other Democratic leaders.

"We think the plan that has been worked out is equitable and that it will meet the favor of the rank and file of the party," Reynolds said. "We feel sure, also, judging by the enthusiasm of those who are helping in the preparations, that it will result in the raising of a substantial sum of money."

Proctor to Settle Fight Over A.M.A. Evidence Today

District Court Justice James M. Proctor will announce this morning whether he will admit into evidence in the "doctors' trial" four volumes of District Medical Society proceedings, which Government attorneys believe may decide the case.

The volumes, subject of impassioned arguments by counsel on both sides, contain the minutes of the society's "expulsion trial" in 1937 of two members who had joined Group Health Association, the prepaid medical cooperative.

The Government is prosecuting the American Medical Association, the District Medical Society and 20 individual doctors under the anti-trust law for alleged restraint of G. H. A.

Roosevelt said today it was obvious that Negroes had not been given equal opportunity in the Army, in the Nation's industrial program or in education, but expressed belief "there is going to be increased opportunity because of jobs that are being created."

The First Lady spoke at the Virginia State College for Negroes before an audience which included the student body and Negro educators from throughout the State.

Discussing the place of youth in the national defense program, Mrs. Roosevelt emphasized the importance of educational training and urged young people to prove their willingness to accept responsibility not only in the present, but also in the democracy of the future.

Cadets Win Appointments

Culver (Ind.) Military Academy yesterday announced the appointment of Charles Schwartz, 2860 Woodland Drive, Washington, as a cadet sergeant in Company B of the Infantry Battalion and Robert E. Earll, 5045 Reno Road Northwest, Washington, as private first class.

CAPRICIOUS IRISH HAWAIIANS. Don Carper and his Cafe Caprice Four shortly will make a cluster of Decca records in conjunction with Lani McIntyre, Irish Hawaiian maestro of New York's Lexington Hotel. Included in the group will be "Pau" (Hawaiian for "We're Through") and "Kehaulani" ("Dewdrops From Heaven"), written by McIntyre for his little daughter . . . Lucille, lovely South Seas dancer-singer, who is Mrs. Don Carper in private life, is now visiting Washington. She speaks Hawaiian like a native and that delicate perfume she prefers is made from pikaki flowers, white blossoms of the Islands. It's a bit like jasmine, but more delicately spicy.

Personality-of-the-week is Alan Gale who opens in Paul Young's tomorrow eve. Nominally Alan is an emcee. In reality he's Dr. Jekyll, Mr. Hyde, Buffalo Bill, Ivan the Terrible and dozens of other high tension characters.

MAYFAIR NEWS. Humorist Strickland Gillilan and the music of Mayfair's own Paul Kain will be broadcast over 105 stations tonight at 7:30 . . . Paul's lost convertible sedan was found up at Fairfax, Va., pretty muddy and with 600 extra miles on the speedometer, otherwise all right. The lad who lifted it turned out to be a 22-year-old boy who wanted to impress his girl friend. Paul, who's soft-hearted that way, isn't going to prosecute . . . Adele Van has signed a contract to appear with the Kain band at Glen Echo next summer . . . Guitarist Bill Gibson of the Kain Mayfairites, celebrated his second wedding anniversary on Saturday. You know Mrs. Gibson as Camille, Mayfair's cute checkroom lass.

SERPENTS AND RAG DOLLS. When Jeanne Francis and Jerry

NANCY GIANNINA, new songbird at Ciro's Famous Village

Grey return to the Shoreham tonight they'll alternately tense up and relax the customers with a "Serpent Dance" and a rag doll number. Manhattan's dancing star, Kay Collis, also will arrive in the Blue Room this evening. And the Music Hall Boys will keep on "Tavern-in-the-Towning" in the conflagration manner.

HERTHQUAKES' CLIMAX. Milt Herth's Trio will wind up in the Neptune Room next Friday night after delighting Washington for months with rarely dynamic modern music. For a fare-ye-well this week they'll play their most demanded request numbers, also a cycle of "sea rhythms" ranging from "Anchors Away" to "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean." After a short Caribbean vacation Milt is booked to make two albums of records, then embark on a lengthy theater tour . . . Saturday in Neptune will be signalized by the advent of the Dalton Boys, pianists Bob and Bertie Hellman, singer Lina D'Acosta . . . Later on, we hear, Evalyn Tyner will return to the Neptune piano from her present Florida engagement.

Troika's Gypsy Markoff is all a-thrill about playing for the notable party given last Friday by Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia and now special assistant to Secretary Hull, and Mrs. Davies. By request Gypsy included several Turkish and Arabic numbers in her program.

VARIED VIEWS. Cosmos Room. Prince and Princess Alexander Hohenlohe, down from Philadelphia. Joaquin M. Elizalde, resident commissioner from the Philippines . . . Mayflower Lounge. Dixie Tighe, smart New York newsgirl and foreign correspondent, wearing a stunning bonnet with a green wool tassle as big as a couple of ostrich plumes . . . Anchor Room. Lillian Ardell, the Grandma Lester of "Tobacco Road," sipping a tall lemonade . . . Silver Fox. "Vin" Gallagher, owner of the King Cole Room; Mrs. Gallagher, and singer Eve Knight. All enjoying the novachording of Tommy Johnson and visiting with Proprietor Fred Johansen of the Silver Fox . . . Lounge Riviera. The unknown young man with a broken arm in a plaster cast, who danced so nimbly to Pete Macias' music. But the Macias rhythm would almost incite stepping even if you had a broken leg.

CASINO ROYAL will present a new revue this evening. It's headed by the Dale Kersten Dancers, also includes a pair of likely young dancers, Chapelle and Hannon, and comedy juggler, Mel Ody, a chappie whose chatter is as magical as his tricks.

STAGE CHILDREN'S SCHOOLING. Little Roxanna Shaw, daughter of dancers Billy and Idylle Shaw at the Lotus, has journeyed all over the world with her parents, never missing a day's schooling. She takes a correspondence course that includes an "examination" after every 20 lessons. The same system, we're told, is used by the children of many American diplomats, consuls and Army and Navy officers in foreign stations.

Patrons of the Parrot are going to miss the pleasant smile of Mrs. Ashley Curtis, manager, for the next few weeks. She's off to Havana for a Pan-American vacation. But her sister and comanager, Miss Jennie Murchison, will keep things running.

CAREER INSPIRATION. The example of Marion Stanfield, singer with Tommy Marvin's Orchestra in the Metronome Room, should encourage every girl who wants to sing with a band. Marion has been with the Marvin band for 14 months, meaning that she's really made good. But before that she'd never sung a note in public except at the Detroit contest for the post of singer with the Marvin unit. She says, "I was just pushed into the contest. I never dreamed I'd win it." And look at her now!

OLD SOL STAYS UP. When Lee Everett was on the early morn radio, they called him Old Sol. But now that he's at Restaurant "823," creating good times until all hours of the night, he's a regular sundodger. Overseeing the stars of "823," Jane Marlow, the Heintze Brothers and Tommy Suter, is his specialty now.

SHORT STORIES. In Madrillon we met an Oriental rug merchant who owns a rug from the palace of the late Czar of all the Russias and is asking $40,000 for it. We reminded him that he'd priced it at $30,000 two years ago. "It'll be worth $100,000 ten years from now," he said . . . Milton Davis and his Rainbow Room Orchestra are smiling wistfully through the snowflakes, hoping for just one balmy day so they can all go out and play golf again . . . Hardy Franks, bassist-singer with Jimmy Summerville's Four M's at Hi Hat, is the readingest musician in town. He carries a book everywhere except on the bandstand.

Oyster fanciers, attention! This year's crop of Chincoteague oysters is the finest in years, says Manager Leo W. McDonald of Olmsted's Grill, a first-class authority on oysters. The 1941 Chincoteague bivalves are bigger, fatter, tastier than ever.

THE SMOKE OF SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS GIVES YOU

EXTRA MILDNESS, EXTRA COOLNESS, EXTRA FLAVOR

AMERICA'S NO. 1 SKIER DICK DURRANCE VS. THE STOP-WATCH AT SUN VALLEY

He's a little man to look at—but on a pair of "hickories" he's a mighty giant. He's held virtually every major down-hill and slalom title in North America. He smokes . . . as much as he likes . . . but note: He smokes the slower-burning cigarette that gives extra mildness and less nicotine in the smoke . . . Camel.

AND

than the average of the 4 other largest-selling cigarettes tested—less than any of them—according to independent scientific tests of the smoke itself

FIVE of the largest-selling cigarettes . . . the brands that most of you probably smoke right now . . . were analyzed and compared by tests of the smoke itself. For, after all, it's what you get in the smoke that interests you . . . the smoke's the thing.

And over and over again the smoke of the slower-burning brand . . . Camel . . . was found to contain less nicotine.

Another triumph for slower burning! Another reason for Camel's front-line position in the cigarette field!

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina

AT THE ROUNDHOUSE high up on Sun Valley's famous Baldy Mountain, Dick Durrance (above) takes time out for another Camel. "That Camel flavor is something special," he says. "Never wears out its welcome—always hits the spot."

Try the slower-burning cigarette yourself. Know the supreme pleasure of a smoke free from the excess heat and irritating qualities of too-fast burning . . . extra cool, extra mild. Enjoy every flavorful puff with the comforting assurance of science that in Camels you're getting less nicotine in the smoke (actual figures above, right).

BY BURNING 25% SLOWER than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—Camels also give you a smoking plus equal, on the average, to 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

That Robin's Here Again

Shivering slightly with sub-freezing District temperatures, the first robin reported here this season yesterday hopped optimistically around the back yard at 839 Rittenhouse Street Northwest.

Mrs. Georgia Sparks, who regularly feeds birds during the winter months, said the spring-harbinger looked well-fed and "obviously glad to be back again."

Eggs Before Chickens

Paul Flick of 1010 Third Street Northeast yesterday reported a truck which he drives for a Washington produce company stolen. It was loaded with chickens and eggs. A few hours later police found the truck at the rear of a lot in the 1700 block of Twentieth Street Northwest. The car was undamaged, and the chickens were unmolested. But the eggs were gone.

200 From D. C. Due To Go in WPA Firing

Works Projects Administration next week will have to fire between 2,500 and 2,800 administrative employes. More than 200 will be from Washington office. The reductions are necessary for the agency to be able to live within its reduced budget for administrative expenses during the next four months. Congress slashed $1,290,000 from the amount officials requested for salaries until June 30. The Senate Appropriations sub-committee recommended the full amount requested by WPA but the full committee reduced the amount to the sum approved by the House by a single vote.

Carol Stacy, OPM secretary, was leaving the building the other evening when a guard demanded to know what she had in an envelope. She opened it up to show him that it was only pictures, not defense secrets.

"Who's that guy," the guard demanded to know.

"Why that's my boss," answered Miss Stacy, "he's A. J. Browning, assistant director of purchases."

"Say," the guard observed, "he's better looking than Paul McNutt. Just think, two handsome guys like that in the same building."

Agriculture had a mystery all its own last week. Anonymous letters written in a flowing Spencerian handwriting were left on the desks of more than 200 key officials. The letters were all the same, a copy of an editorial from a New Jersey newspaper that attacked the department's farm policy . . . Soil Conservation Service has been declared a defense agency by the Civil Service Commission. Its land acquisition division has the reputation of being the fastest land buyer in the country and it is now handling all of the War Department's land deals.

The general investigator exam given several years ago which produced a record of 240,000 applicants and thousands of eligibles is being used extensively by the Civil Service Commission to supply file clerks, undererclerks, messengers and other clerical employes. The addressograph register also is being used to supply clerical personnel. Incidentally, there were so many eligibles from New York City on the general investigator register that they have formed a union. It's the first such organization.

Census Post Fight

James C. Capt, assistant to the Census director, is reported to have the inside track to succeed William Austin as Census director, but a hot scramble for the job continues. Capt is a Texan like his boss, Jesse Jones. Most members of the Texas congressional delegation have urged his appointment. Capt ran a string of creameries in the Lone Star before the depression caught up with him. He worked for WPA before Harry Hopkins gave him the Census job. He has done plenty of favors for members of Congress as he handled Census patronage in the field. However, Acting Director Vergil Reed, a competent career man, has potent backing for the job and at least two former Democratic members of Congress are trying to land it.

The War Department is hiring several hundred new employes daily. An average of 50 a day are being hired here. In Army arsenals women are being hired as fuse operatives. The main requirement for this job is nimble fingers, such as those of women who are good at handiwork, typing and the like. The Frankford arsenal in Philadelphia is hiring a considerable number of the women.

The defense program has proved a God-send to physically handicapped persons. Hundreds of persons with either one arm or one leg have been placed in defense jobs. Employment Service has done a remarkable work by finding jobs for the disabled. Last year approximately 12,000 physically disabled were placed by the Federal service. But what is more remarkable is the fact that the Office of Education rehabilitation service last year trained roughly 10,000 for defense jobs. Fewer than were given jobs. Several Federal Security officials believe this is the supreme opportunity to get a large number of disabled persons off relief rolls into jobs. It is being suggested that Employment Service take over the training program from the Office of Education.

Fall of France Blamed on Lack Of Social Justice

An Austrian-born scholar, journalist and diplomat told an American University audience yesterday that a main reason France fell was the failure of French democracy to provide social justice.

Dr. Egon Ranshofen-Wertheimer, a visiting professor of international affairs, said that "even after the outbreak of war, the antagonism between French employers and workers did not come to rest." He spoke to an audience of 250 in Hurst Hall.

"French democracy had degenerated so far," he said, "that great sections of the people did not feel it worthwhile to sacrifice to maintain it . . .

"Had the French people believed their republic meant social justice and something higher than totalitarianism, the disastrous situation would not have arisen."

Junior Aviation Show Advanced to Saturday

The aviation show scheduled by junior programs for Montgomery County schools at the Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School, Philadelphia and Chicago, Avenues, will be Saturday at 2 p. m. instead of March 15, it was announced yesterday.

This is the third in the series of four Saturday afternoon entertainments being presented this season at the school under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Takoma Garden Group To Hold Annual Party

The annual dinner and entertainment of the Takoma Horticulture Club will be held tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. in the parish hall of Trinity Episcopal Church, Piney Branch Road and Dahlia Street Northwest.

Brothers in Rescue Role

FIRE DAMAGES HOME—Garbed in ecclesiastical robes, brothers (lower picture) of the Sacred Heart Seminary yesterday saved furniture from the burning home (upper picture) of Mr. and Mrs. William Daniel at 4518 Sargent Road Northeast. Mass was just ending as flames enveloped the roof of the home. While the family escaped unharmed, the brothers and the Rev. Philemond Lefever, superior of the seminary, entered the house and carried out most of the furniture

Among the happiest Salvation Army workers in the city yesterday were Grace Fox, Norma Roberts and Ernest Carey.

They won first, second and third prizes, respectively, in a citywide Salvation Army oratorical contest that was part of an "Army" youth conference which closed last night at Temple Corps, 606 E Street Northwest.

They all received combination Bibles and Salvation Army songbooks from the hands of Lieut. Col. Richard B. Stretton, chief secretary of the Southern Territory.

To Compete At Atlanta

Grace, 15-year-old Taft Junior High School student, will go to Atlanta in the fall to compete in the Southern area finals. Norma, 18, is a Minor Teachers College student, while Ernest, 19, handles boys' work for the Georgetown "Army" Corps.

All of them discussed the general theme of "Putting God into Everyday Living."

That could be done, said Grace, through practically acknowledging Christ as a friend, witnessing for him in everyday living and setting a good example in school, at home and at play, and in other phases of life.

High Officers Participate

Norma said young persons must show "cynical youths" that the Christian life is the real life through being personally earnest in their own lives.

Participating in the Salvation meeting last night were Maj. Richard Fitton, of Atlanta, Ga., territorial young people's secretary, and Mrs. Fitton; Maj. and Mrs. Stretton; Maj. Charles F. Dodd, divisional commander, National Capital area, and Mrs. Dodd; Adjutant William T. Powell, divisional young people's secretary, and Mrs. Powell.

Black-bonneted girls and blue-uniformed boys played in the Salvation Army Band under the direction of Capt. Edgar Wilmer.

Boys Club Drive Workers to Hear Father Cartwright

The Rev. John Keating Cartwright, of Immaculate Conception Church, will address the volunteer workers of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club campaign tomorrow at 12:30 in the National Press Club.

Some 1,200 workers are canvassing the city to help raise funds to provide for 16,500 members of the five Police Boys Clubs, and campaign leaders hope for an optimistic report tomorrow. A fourth session will be held Friday. The final luncheon is scheduled for March 11.

R. Carl Mitchell's division continues to set the pace among the ten divisions with $1,653, while Col. E. Goring Bliss and his cochairman, John Waters, are entrenched in second place, their team having subscribed $1,114.

Dr. Griffith to Speak At D. C. Welsh Fete

Dr. Ivor Griffith, dean and research director of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science, will be the principal speaker and toastmaster at the annual banquet of the Saint David's Society of Washington at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard Streets, Saturday at 6:30 p. m.

The occasion will be part of a nationwide celebration by people of Welsh descent. Proceeds from the local banquet will be used for British War Relief.

400 Catholic Men Attend Lay Retreat

More than 400 Catholic men were told here yesterday that their devotion to spiritual principles will help them meet the challenges of nazism, communism, fascism and paganism.

Attending the annual communion breakfast of the Washington section of the League of Laymen's Retreats at the Mayflower Hotel, following a mass at St. Matthew's Cathedral, they heard Rossa F. Downing, the Rev. Robert S. Lloyd, S. J., and other speakers.

"Liberty, freedom of expression and worship, all the things we cherish, are being challenged today by those who would deny that democracy is worthwhile, that God and eternal life are worthwhile," Father Lloyd said. He is spiritual director of the Manresa Retreat House, Annapolis, Md.

"We must choose between the camp of Jesus Christ and that of Satan," he said, stating that the spiritual exercises St. Ignatius Loyola used at Manresa retreats are a great factor in building and maintaining Christian character.

Father Lloyd, in his annual report, announced that 2,047 men—an increase of 193 over 1939-40—have made 43 Manresa retreats during the past year from the Washington and Baltimore areas. Forty-eight retreats are scheduled for the March 15-September 15 season this year, he said.

Smithsonian Expert to Study Peru Mummies

A group of mummies wrapped in elaborate fabrics, found a few years ago at Paracas, Peru, will be investigated in the spring by Dr. T. D. Stewart, Smithsonian Institution anthropologist.

The scientist further intends studying skulls and other skeletal remains of the pre-Inca Peruvians. Dr. Stewart will make a particular search for any evidences of either tuberculosis or syphilis among these ancient people, for whether the diseases existed in the New World before the coming of the Spaniards is said to be a moot question. Dr. Stewart, in his studies, will cooperate with Peruvian anthropologists.

4 Hurt in Md. Plane Crash Recovering

Four residents of the Washington area who were injured in an airplane crash near Elkton, Md., Saturday were reported recovering last night, three of them at the Washington Sanitorium and the fourth at home.

At Washington Sanitorium were Edmond Daley, of Rockville, Md., and Winfield Treadwell, of 5201 Colorado Avenue Northwest, each suffering from a broken leg, and Troy Jacobs, of Takoma Park, Md., who suffered cuts and cruises. William Melton, of Clifton Park Village, Md., was in bed at home with cuts and bruises.

1,000 Attend St. Joseph's Jubilee

More than 1,000 members of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, on Capitol Hill, were told at yesterday's golden jubilee mass that their church symbolizes the importance of great religious and moral truths. While the church was founded during the Civil War, the occasion marked 50 years' occupancy of the present building.

"This church has stood here in the very shadow of the Capitol as a symbol of things immeasurably more important than the events which were transpiring within the Capitol itself, "the Right Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan said in his sermon.

Msgr. Shehan is director of Washington Catholic Charities and assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Church. He spoke during the solemn high mass, which opened with a procession from the rectory at 313 C Street Northeast into the edifice at Second and C Streets Northeast.

Bishop Leads March

Leading the marchers were the acolytes and crossbearers, while following in succession were the red-cassocked and white-surpliced small altar boys, guest priests, the red-vested monsignori, the Very Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington and Baltimore, and the Right Rev. Thomas A. Rankin, vicar general of the Richmond Diocese, the Right Rev. Msgr. Edward P. McAdams, St. Joseph's rector, and others.

Bishop McNamara presided at the solemn pontifical mass, acting for the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, who is in Florida recuperating from an illness. Msgr. Rankin was celebrant.

Other officers were the Rev. J. Jennings Clark and the Rev. James I. Bifield, deacon and subdeacon, respectively, and the Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S. S., of the Sulpician Seminary, Catholic University, master of ceremonies.

Chaplains to Bishop McNamara were the Rev. Henry J. Wiesel, S. J., rector of St. Aloysius' Church, and the Very Rev. Denis J. Kavanaugh, superior of the Augustinian College at Catholic University. Holy Name Society men formed an honor guard for the dignitaries as they entered the church.

Msgr. Shehan declared in his address that "the great religious and moral truths which the Church has always proclaimed and for which she has fought so courageously in modern times are the very center of all civilization and the foundation of all government."

Catholic dignitaries from Maryland, Virginia and Washington attended the services. They included, in addition to those officiating, the Right Rev. Monsignori, Eugene J. Connelly, rector of St. Peter's nearby; Michael J. Riordan, of St. Martins here; Charles R. O'Hara, of Holy Comforter; Edward L. Buckey, of St. Matthew's Cathedral; the Rev. Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University; the Very Rev. Leonard A. Walsh, Superior of the Franciscan Monastery; the Very Rev. John F. Fenlon, of Baltimore, Provincial of the Sulpician Order, and others.

James Cardinal Gibbons, as Archbishop of Baltimore, dedicated the present church structure on January 20, 1891. He laid the cornerstone of the original church on October 25, 1868, just two months after having been consecrated Vicar Apostolic of North Carolina.

Church's Manhood Summoned by Lent, Says Fr. Reilly

Lent is a call to the manhood of the church, the Rev. John J. Reilly said yesterday in one of the many pre-Lenten messages heard by Washington worshipers. Ash Wednesday, which opens Lent, is day after tomorrow.

Preaching at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, the Shrine director said "the world is filled today with grown-ups acting like 2-year-olds, and children playing with tanks and machine guns," then added:

"Just as intrigue topples thrones of worldly monarchs, when sacrifice departs from our lives, the throne supporting what should rule our lives crumbles, too."

Father Reilly called Lent "an opportunity provided by the church to reinstate our wills to the place they should occupy, the controlling factor of our lives."

Many other sermons yesterday also stressed the theme of National Brotherhood Week, the celebration of which began last Saturday.

J. J. Reinhard Honored By Indiana Alumni

Fifty members of the Indiana University Alumni Association attended a breakfast yesterday in honor of John J. Reinhard, Justice Department attorney, who is retiring as the association's president. James L. Fieser, national vice chairman of the American Red Cross, will succeed him. The breakfast was held in the Kennedy-Warren Hotel. Reinhard was presented a volume of history on the university.

Women's Club Leaders Plan Inventory of Defense Skills

Leaders of four international women's classified service clubs decided yesterday to register the skills of 20,000 business and professional women for defense.

The women met at the Mayflower Hotel in the first conference of its kind in women's club history. Clubs represented were Altrusa, Quota, Soroptimist and Zonta. Pilot International is expected to cooperate in the common program, although its president could not get to the meeting.

The five clubs have more than 700 local chapters with a total of 20,000 members.

The women yesterday decided, in addition to the inventory of skills, to obtain defense training opportunities for women, to sponsor local community activities that stimulate loyalty to country, to help train youth for effective citizenship, and to support the consumers protection program of the National Defense Commission.

The meeting was attended by Mrs. Dessalee Ryan Dudley, of Battle Creek, Mich., president of Altrusa; Mrs. Clara Mason, of Fargo, N. Dak., president, and Miss Gwladys W. Jones, of Washington, secretary of Quota; Mrs. Jean Benett, of Washington, president, and Miss Martha R. Servis, of Philadelphia, secretary of Soroptimist; and Mrs. May Moyers McElroy, of Washington, president, and Miss Harriet C. Richards, of Chicago, Ill., secretary of Zonta.

A buffett supper at the Shoreham Hotel, given by the local clubs, followed the meeting.

Postlude

Heifetz's Superb Playing Delights District Audience

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Jascha Heifetz in a violin recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Assisting artist: Emanual Bay, pianist. Program: Sonata Movement in C minor (Brahms), Sonata in B flat major, K. V. 378 (Mozart), Sonata in E flat major, Op. 18 (Richard Strauss), Concerto No. 8 in A minor (Spohr), Two Preludes (Gershwin-Heifetz), "Hexapoda: Five Studies in Jitteroptera" (Robert Russell Bennett).

Jascha Heifetz drew an admiring throng to Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon, and the admiration was well expended upon the phenomenal technique, the polished artistry and the refined musicianship of this first-rank violinist. Ever since he made his American debut as a 16-year-old lad in 1917, his playing has been characterized by an invariably even balance between technical skill and finesse in interpretation. At first his poise was mistaken for coldness of temperament; but it has long been realized that his emotional restraint is motivated by an instinctive distate for excess. Sentimentality of phrasing is anathema to him, and he constantly guards against the danger that pathos may fall into bathos.

BROWN

He began his interesting program with a reading of the infrequently heard sonata movement in C minor by Brahms. Inasmuch as this piece is virtually a stranger in concert halls today, a few words about its origin will not be out of place. Once, when expecting a visit from Joachim, Schumann suggested to two of his friends that they collaborate in writing a sonata and let the violinist guess the author of each movement. Albert Dietrich composed the first movement, Schumann the intermezzo and finale, and Brahms the scherzo on a theme from Dietrich's movement. The story goes that when Joachim had played the sonata with Clara Schumann, he at once identified the composer of each part.

Brahms' part of the jesting music was followed by Mozart's B flat major sonata, incorrectly labeled No. 10, whereas it is No. 36 in the list of 42 works for violin and piano. Heifetz gave it a sensitive and highly intelligent reading, with particular care for the grace and delicacy of Mozartian style. In his interpretation he was excellently aided by Emanuel Bay, whose piano playing throughout the recital was remarkably consentient and supple.

At their second appearance, the two artists presented a buoyant and poetic performance of the E flat major sonata by Richard Strauss, the last movement of which so strongly resembles in soaring theme the orchestral tone-poem, "Don Juan."

Strauss was still voicing the "first fine careless rapture" of romanticism which he later lost.

Romanticism was also predominant in Spohr's eighth concerto in A minor, cast in the form of a recitative and dramatic aria. Once a war horse of violinists, this work has fallen into desuetude, and its revival by Heifetz was an occasion for enjoying once more its combination of eloquent cantilena and brilliant double-stopping.

In the final group Heifest offered his own transcription of two piano preludes by the late George Gershwin and Robert Russell Bennett's clever "Hexapoda," five studies in swing music. The transcriptions were so well done as to be obviously a labor of friendly affection for the composer.

Bennett's studies in "Jitteroptera" are not as satiric as the title would imply. They do not so much caricature their subject matter as treat it with a sympathetic patronage subtly touched with irony.

All Hospitals Will Share Blood Bank

Committee Drafts System to Spread Benefits of Life Saving Reservoir

The Children's Hospital blood bank soon will be made available to all the District's hospitals on a systematic basis, officials said yesterday.

The hospital's laboratory committee, which supervises the bank, has been drawing up plans that are expected to transform the blood bank into a city-wide reservoir available to all emergency cases and needy individuals, child and adult.

This disclosure followed a letter to The Post from Dr. T. Eward Jones, director of Freedmen's Hospital, suggesting that "the benefits of this blood bank campaign be extended to some hospital in the District in which adults are hospitalized."

Children's Hospital officials revealed that Garfield and Columbia Hospitals already have been granted access to the bank.

At the present stage, plans for the city-wide reservoir provide that any hospital may borrow blood for an emergency case or for a needy individual. Then, either through a purchase of an equal amount of blood, or through the donation of blood by a friend of the patient, the supply is to be replenished.

Two parties were scheduled for tonight as part of the third annual campaign for the blood bank.

The Federal Bridge League will hold a card party at 8 p. m. at the Wardman Park Hotel. Duplicate bridge will be played, the league announced. Free space has been donated by the hotel, and the party will be open to the public.

The Colonial Village Club will gather for a card party at the Colonial Village Community House at 8 p. m.

Dr. John W. Dudey, of 1200 Delafield Place Northwest, reported yesterday that a stag card party at his home Friday night raised $9 for the fund. Dr. Dudley is a member of the Vincent B. Costello Post of the American Legion.

Endeavorers Mark 16th Year

The sixteenth anniversary of Christian Endeavor was observed by Alpha Alumni Council of the National City Christian Church last night with special services at its regular monthly devotional meeting.

Mrs. T. T. Williford was in charge of the program, with J. M. Pickens, Miss Pauline Shoemaker and T. T. Williford as speakers. Mr. and Mrs. Leo Tooley sang special music.

Jug McSpaden Wins $3,000 Open With 207

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 23.—Want to hear the confessions of a boy who finds himself a star big league pitcher much to his own surprise? Sidney Hudson, who came out of a corny Class D league and now is one of the top pitchers in the majors, still is slightly bewildered at his success.

POVICH

"I've been pinching myself all winter, trying to realize last season was no dream and that I really won 17 games in a big league. Honest, there were times when I'd stand in front of the mirror to see if I was the same fellow that kids all over the country were writing letters asking for my autograph and a picture.

"I thought that trying to pitch in the big leagues was just a wild idea of mine. When the Washington club bought me last winter, I never expected to land in the majors, not for several years at least. I knew Washington had a lot of minor league farms and that's where I expected to go.

"I still don't know why Washington didn't farm me out after I lost seven games in a row at the start of the season. I thought Bucky Harris was crazy to keep me. It didn't seem like I was ever going to win. Just about that time, the Athletics sent Herman Besse back to the minors after he had lost only a couple of games in the American League. Besse, the year before, was the leading pitcher in the Southern League which was a lot better than the league I came out of, but still Washington kept me.

"Clark Griffith called me into his office three or four times, and I always figured he was going to send me back to the minors. But he never mentioned letting me go. He would always tell me to keep my chin up and forget about the games I was losing. After I lost five in a row, he gave me a raise and I walked out of his office groggy.

"Those big league hitters were murdering the stuff I used to get by with in the Florida State League and they had me crazy. The baseball writers kept saying I had a lot of poise out there and I could never understand that. I was so nervous and fidgety that everything looked like a blur. There were times when I'd be out there with a ball in my hand, afraid to throw it.

"I thought that the fellows hitting down in the batting order were supposed to be breathers for the pitchers, but they all looked tough to me after I'd been whacked around a few times. I never knew what to throw and I'd keep thinking I was just a bush league pitcher.

"But Bucky Harris kept shoving me back in there and I began to get used to the whole business. Then every once in a while I'd fool one of those good hitters. I began to get a little bit of confidence. Then I got a whole lot more confidence and, boy, that was wonderful. Everything seemed to be different after that. The same hitter who used to scare the hck out of me didn't look so tough. And I began to feel that I was beginning to look a little bit tough to him. I stopped worrying about what I was going to throw him. I'd just say to myself, 'I'm gonna give this guy my No. 2' and let it be his worry. It began to work out swell, and those hitters stopped taking toe-holds and I began to win some ball games.

"I only saw two big league games in my life before I found myself pitching in one. When I did find myself in the big leagues, I was a bit disappointed by what I saw. I always thought that real big leaguers were a little bit superhuman, but I saw some of them who looked like ordinary ball players. I couldn't quite understand it, though, when they were beating my brains out early in the season.

"The one fellow I used to marvel at was Ted Lyons. I'd sit in our dugout and stare at him when he was pitching. He's the smartest pitcher I ever saw. With the same motion, he throws a half dozen different kind of pitches up there. I found out that everybody liked Lyons and then I found why. He came over to me one day, introduced himself and asked me if I'd mind if he showed me a couple of things about pitching.

"Lyons took me aside for a half hour before the ball game and told me I could get a lot of those hitters out if I had a good change of pace. He didn't like the let-up ball I was throwing. He showed me how I was tipping it off to the batter and then he showed me how to throw it in the same motion that I threw my curve. Lyons was wonderful, and those games came a lot easier with my new let-up ball.

"The team that gave me the most trouble was the Browns. They beat me four times until I caught up with them with that one-hit shutout in St. Louis. But the game I liked the best was the one I pitched against the Yankees. For some reason, I hadn't faced the Yanks all season and they were saying I was scared of 'em. I always wanted to ask Bucky Harris to pitch me against the Yanks but I didn't have the nerve. But on the last day of the season, he put me in there and I licked 'em 4-3. I was really trying hard, and I was saying to myself today when I got back into a Washington uniform that this is no time to quit trying."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 23.—If Hank Greenberg did ask his draft board to give him a six-month deferment, he did only what every ball player concerned has been wanting to do. Some of the owners also have wanted to make this same request, but, like the ball players, they were counselled not to do so for fear of public ridicule and that many drafted plumbers, carpenters, clerks, etc. would indignantly demand the same consideration.

CONSIDINE

The ball player reasons this way:

I'm in a special trade, unlike any other. I've only got a few years in which to make my money; then my earning power stops. There is no way of making up a year's inactivity. I'll have eight good years, if I'm lucky. If I must lay off for a year in the middle of that span, that year can't be recovered. There is no way it can be tacked on the end, for a man wears out physically and uses up his good years whether he is playing or not.

"Other fellows can go back to their trades and professions, after military service, and command the same money and the same opportunities for advancement. If I serve a solid year, near the end of my playing span, there's little chance that I can get my job back. Some kid with fresher muscles will have come along and won my job.

"And even if I do get back in the league, they're not going to pay me my old dough. No club would do that for a player whose ability is now a little uncertain because of a long layoff. Besides, a year away from baseball would mean that it will take me most of another year to get the swing of things . . . Even though I play a little Army camp baseball.

"Why not let me serve my year's training in two 6-month hitches? I could leave for camp the day the season ends, October 1, and come back to baseball April 1. Then after the following season the following year I could serve the remaining six months. What's wrong with that? I serve a year, don't I? And when I'm not serving I'm paying good taxes, ain't I? And helping provide people with the kind of entertainment they want."

This is the philosophy of the big leaguer. But few of them, if any, have said it openly. Most of them are old enough to remember the bleak tirade against certain sports figures around the time of World War I. They hesitate to expose themselves to similar blasts, as well as to the riding from "bench jockeys." We don't know how you feel about what they believe. To us, it isn't despicable at all. Their beef is more or less legitimate, at least until we come out bluntly and announce that we are at war.

Ran into Charley Conacher the other day. Charley was one of hockey's all time wingmen, but in recent years he has retreated to the defense position, for the New York Americans, and it has given him time to reflect on what is happening to his game.

"The most important idea that has come into hockey in my time is forechecking," he told us. Then he explained, "forechecking is sending your men up the ice to disorganize your opponents' attack before the attack can fully form. The New York Rangers are past masters of this, probably because Lester Patrick had a lot to do with devising the scheme.

"It has had its effect all through the game. For instance, it cuts down on long passes, long shots at the cage, and makes most all the scoring be done from a scramble, around the net. It has helped to change the style of stickwork. The boys today use a lot of wrist and shoulder on their shots. In my day (note: Conacher could sling that puck faster than Feller can throw a baseball) we had time to put our whole body into a shot. But that's gone."

Conacher thinks that the players coming up today have just as much gusty love of the game as the burly old pioneers of a decade and more ago. "You've got to love a sport to be good at it," he says. He believes that the finest forward to come up rcently is his brother, Roy, of the Bruins. He never expects to see the day when citizens of this country command even half the jobs in the National Hockey League.

Speedsters Amass 70 Points Each

42d National Indoor Championships End In Deadlock 1stTime; Jahns Steal Show

By Jack Munhall

The forty-second National Indoor Speed Skating championships skidded to a precedent-shattering finish at Uline Arena last night when for the first time in history a tie developed for the senior all-events title.

Roy Erickson, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Ice Palace, and John Simmons, of Stamford, Conn., each amassed 70 points to jointly supplant the disappointing Leo Freisinger, Chicago's defending champion, who was completely shut out during the two-day event.

The two were tied before the final 5-mile race, but neither was able to place as the gruelling 70-lap affair was won by Joseph Fullin, Norwalk, Conn., who collapsed just across the finish line and burrowed his nose in the half-inch of water covering a track that contestants described as "in bad condition."

Erickson Takes Spill

Strangely, Erickson was unable to win a single crown, and Simmons won only one, but both consistently placed in the six events that decided the awarding of the trophy which finally went to Simmons. The pair raced off at three-quarters of a mile, and Simmons won as Erickson fell and never was able to overcome his disadvantage.

Third to the victorious pair in one of the closest men's races in the annals of the event was Bud Handlan, Winter Garden Skating Club, St. Louis, who garnered 60 points.

Erickson picked up his points through second places in the 880 and mile, and Simmons tallied with his lone victory in the ¾ mile and a second in the 1 mile and a third in the 2 miles.

Outstanding individuals of the meet were the Cresskill (N. J.) widely known sister-brother act of Virginia and Bobby Jahn, who between them acccounted for five titles, three of which fell to 16-year-old Bobby, a student at Tenafly, N. J., High School. Bobby annexed the 440 and 880 races and then raced to a rare triple dead heat in the mile.

Falls in Clear

Miss Jahn, 18 years old and a freshman at New York University, where she is majoring in physical education, won the 440 and 880 and placed second in the mile. Only in the ¾ mile was she unplaced, and in that event she fell on the next to last lap when she appeared to have a chance to make a clean sweep of the championships.

Miss Jahn's easy victory came in

Ozarks Boast 10 Straight Victories In Southwest Conference

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 23.—The long college basketball season finally is getting to the stage where one team in each section can proudly claim the year's championship, but so far there's only one team whose claims are certain to stand up during the last week or two of the campaign.

That one is Arkansas, holder of one of the Nation's finest court records this year. The tall men of the Ozarks, winners of 17 out of 19 games against all kinds of opposition, clinched the Southwest Conference title last week when they whipped Texas Christian twice. That gave them a record of ten straight victories in conference competition.

Stanford, North Carolina and Kentucky also are sure to finish the regular season on top of their respective heaps and there's only an outside chance that Washington State will fail. All of these, however, will be involved in post-season competition that may change the whole situation.

Stanford Faces Playoff

Stanford, which won the Southern division title in the Pacific Coast Conference last week, still faces a playoff with the Northern division winner if the playoff dates can be suitably rearranged.

Washington State figures to win the Northern title unless it should lose all its three remaining games while Oregon State won five straight.

North Carolina, which won 14 of 15 regular season games in the Southern Conference, goes into the annual tournament starting Thursday as an overwhelming favorite to repeat last year's triumph.

In the Southeastern Conference the title also will be decided in tournament play although Kentucky won seven out of eight to lead the regular season by a one-game margin over Florida.

In the Eastern "Ivy" League, Dartmouth virtually sewed up its fourth consecutive championship by whipping Columbia 49-36 yesterday after Harvard had upset Cornell Friday. But the Indians, beaten once in eight league games, still have to carry their winning pace to the middle of March.

The Big Ten championship may be settled tomorrow when Wisconsin and Indiana, running one-two, a

Orioles Beat Skeeters, 6-2, To Take Lead

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 23.—The Eastern Amateur Hockey League lead changed hands again tonight with the Baltimore Orioles defeating the River Vale Skeeters, 6 to 2, to go a single point ahead of the Washington Eagles.

It was the fifth time in the past two weeks that the league lead has switched between Washington and Baltimore. The Eagles and the Orioles play in Washington Tuesday night.

The fourth-place Skeeters got the jump on the Orioles tonight, Goodfellow scoring unassisted after three minutes. But the Orioles quickly rang up three goals before the first period ended to sew up the contest.

Rover Six Routs Olympics, 8 to 3

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 23.—The New York Rovers, tailenders of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, swamped the fifth-place Boston Olympics, 8 to 3, today, before 9,682 fans at Madison Square Garden.

The visitors, minus five of their best players, battled courageously to the end, but were powerless against the fierce onslaught of the Red Shirts.

Lude Check and Bill Tilson each tallied twice for the Rovers. Paul Guibord scored two of Boston's goals.

Bruins Run Streak To 23 Victories

Boston, Feb. 23 (INS).—Running their unbeaten string to 23 games, the Boston Bruins tonight swept back into first place in the National Hockey League with a 3-to-1 victory over the hapless New York Americans.

Toronto's defeat at the hands of Detroit dropped the Leafs to second place in the standings.

Goalie Charley Rayner turned in a great performance for the Amerks with 60 saves to his credit.

Dog Champs Vie Today In Field Trials

By the Associated Press

Grand Junction, Tenn., Feb. 23.—The Nation's bird dog champions go on display here tomorrow as the opening rounds of the national field trials get under way over the vast wooded ridges and fields of the Hobart Ames plantation.

Forty-six entries, all of them winners of major field trial tests, are entered for the colorful meet—oldest of all field trials. Although several dogs probably will be scratched before the first brace is put down, the 1941 field is expected to be the largest in years.

Last year's winner, Lester's Enjoy Wahoo, owned by Dr. B. S. Lester, of Birmingham, Ala., is among the entries.

College Athletes Live Longer Than 'Student'

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 23 (AP).—College athletes live longer than their fellows, a Harvard physiologist said today.

Dr. David B. Dill told a group at Harvard Medical School that there was "scant evidence for believing that high school and college sports, if carried on under medical supervision, are other than beneficial, however, fatiguing they may be."

Gregory Rice Is Awarded Sullivan Memorial Trophy

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 23.—Greg Rice, the record-smashing distance runner who says he never would have become a track star if there had been a baseball team in Missoula, Mont., when he was a boy, today received the James E. Sullivan Memorial trophy.

The trophy is awarded each year by the Amateur Athletic Union to the athlete who "by his performance, example and influence has done the most during the year to advance the cause of sportsmanship."

The presentation was made by Lawrence di Benedetto, of New Orleans, A. A. U. president, at a luncheon at the New York Athletic Club. The Sullivan trophy is awarded through the vote of a tribunal of 600 sports leaders.

Rice, accepting the trophy, described his record-breaking three-mile performance in last night's national indoor championships. He explained that he had run the first mile in 4:32, five seconds faster than he had planned, so he ran the second mile five seconds slower and still finished in 13:51, one and three tenths seconds faster than the old record.

Sphas Defeat Brewer Five Here, 39 to 35

After waging a great uphill fight to three times tie and twice pass the Philadelphia Sphas in the final period, the Washington Brewers last night lost an American Basketball League game to the world champions before 1,000 spectators at Riverside Stadium, 39-35.

The count was knotted at 35-all with little more than a minute to go when Howard (Red) Rosan scored the winning field goal and big Irving Torgoff definitely clinched it shortly afterward with another.

The Brewers were trailing at the end of the second period, 21-26, but started a stretch spurt that pulled them within 29-30 of the Sphas in the last period on Moe Dubilier's field goal. Nat Frankel followed with a basket to send Washington out in front, 31-30.

Rosan again tied it on a foul, but Ben Goldfadden contributed the finest play of the night when he blocked a pass, recovered the ball and cut into the basket to send the Brewers ahead for the last time on an overhead shot, 33-31.

Joe Gotthofer and Torgoff sent Baltimore out in front with successive field goals, but Frankel tied it on a basket from scrimmage. Then it was that Rosan and Torgoff contributed the winning points.

Torgoff scored 12 points and Petey Rosenberg 10 for the Sphas while Goldfadden, playing one of his greatest games, provided 8 for the Brewers.

Torgoff Is Spark

The Brewers started out in whirlwind fashion and grabbed an early 4-to-0 lead when Coach Mack Posnack converted a follow-up shot and Posnack and Nat Frankel cashed consecutive fouls.

The Sphas hit their stride as the period progressed, however, and finally tied it at 8-8 when Irving Torgoff scored from the floor and then sent them ahead with a beautiful pot shot, 10-8.

Torgoff, finding the basket from all angles, had sparked the Sphas into a 15-10 command at intermission.

The Sphas made the most of their opportunities and the Brewers failed to connect on several hard-luck shots as the visitors maintained an advantage throughout the second period.

Rosan and Lautman collaborated in an attack that had sent the Sphas out in front at one time, 20-13, but the Brewers tightened their defense while Berenson and Rabin made it 17-20 on consecutive field goals.

Doris Smith Takes Gulli Sweepstakes

Doris Smith, of Norfolk, Va., blonde and beauteous winner of the recent Chesapeake Sweepstakes in Baltimore, last night came through with her second major bowling triumph of the season by winning the eighth annual Lorraine Gulli stakes at Lucky Strike Alleys.

Miss Smith, with a pinfall of 1,295, took the $100 top money over a field of 72 contestants—the same number who participated in the bowling classic last year.

Grouped behind Miss Smith in second, third and fourth places, respectively, were Lucy Rose, of Rosslyn, with 1,245, $60 winner; Helen Randlett, of Richmond, with a $50 winning 1,245, and Katherine Vick, of Norfolk, No. 2 woman bowler in the Nation, whose 1,218 won the $40 fourth money.

Carolina Hiser, of Hyattsville, finished with a 1,217, which won her $30 fifth-place money.

Miss Gulli, ranked as the No. 3 woman bowler in the Nation, finished in sixth place with a 1,200 pinfall—four pins behind the top-ranking woman duckpin artist, Ida Simmons, of Norfolk. Miss Simmons took $25 and Miss Gulli, the $20 prize.

Other money winners included Lola Shanahan, of Baltimore, 1,193; Mary Magnotto, of Washington, 1,189, and Audrey Mullaney, Baltimore, who tied with Betty James, also of Baltimore, with 1,177.

Boston Pro Beats Field By 8 Strokes

Shatters Par by Seven Shots on Last Day; Three Tied For Second Honors

By the United Press

Thomasville, Ga., Feb. 23.—Harold (Jug) McSpaden, smooth-stroking professional from Boston, Mass., today won his first major tournament of this season, carding a 54-hole aggregate of 207, nine under par, to take first-prize money of $700 in the sixth annual $3,000 Thomasville Open.

McSpaden ended the first 18 holes yesterday with a 70, two under par and a stroke behind the two leaders. He shared the 70 bracket with six others.

The Boston pro clipped four strokes off par this morning to take the lead at the two-thirds mark and then blazed down the home stretch with a 69.

Eight Strokes Ahead

McSpaden finished eight strokes ahead of the nearest contender.

Bunched at 215 were Lloyd Mangrum, the defending champion from Chicago; Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., and Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y. Each won $360.

Hogan maintained his lead in total winnings among the touring pros. The $360 prize brought his total for the season to $4,510.

McSpaden's victory in this Open kept intact the record the professionals were maintaining this season of not letting the same player win two tournaments. Each tourney in the winter circuit so far had produced a new champion. The next stop for the professionals is St. Petersburg, Fla.

Jack Grout, Pittston, Pa., won fifth prize money of $220 with a 216 aggregate.

Tied for the next position were Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex., and Byron Nelson, Professional Golfers' Association titleholder from Chicopee, Mass. They had 217's.

Little Out of Money

Far back in the field and out of the money were National Open Champion Lawson Little, San Francisco, with 222, and Horton Smith, the veteran from Chicago, with 223. Smith shared the lead with Mangrum at the end of the first 18 holes, having a 69.

Tommy Barnes, Atlanta, and Jack Slayton, Columbus, Ga., tied for top honors among amateurs. They shot 227's. Charley Yates, Atlanta, former British amateur champion, was second with 231.

Johnny Bulla, of Chicago, shot the best nine holes of the tournament—a 33.

Conn, Jenkins Fight This Week

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—Billy Conn and Lew Jenkins, light-heavy and lightweight champion, respectively, spotlight this week's national boxing program.

Jenkins takes on Lou Ambers, of Herkimer, N. Y., the man from whom he won the title. They meet in a 10-round overweight bout at Madison Square Garden Friday. A victory for either gladiator may bring a welterweight title match with champion Fritizie Zivic.

Gene Buffalo 8-5 Favorite Over Phil Furr Tonight at Arena

Full House Expected To See Bout

'Furr's Last Stand' Is Billing Given To 10-Round Battle; Main Fight at 10 P.M.

By Al Hailey

Phil Furr will go to the post an 8-to-5 underdog tonight at Turner's Arena in what may turn out to be his farewell appearance in a Washington boxing ring.

The 30-year-old Washington welterweight will attempt to fulfill a ten-round date with Philadelphia's Young Gene Buffalo, colored 150-pounder, and if he fails to come through they're going to pull down the shades on his boxing career.

At least, that's the way Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menenden would have it, for although Phil still has his punch, his legs are beginning to show the signs of more than a decade of fighting.

Furr's Last Stand

Taking their cue from "Custer's Last Stand," Turner and Menendez are calling tonight's business "Furr's last stand"—that is, if he fails to get by Buffalo. Menendez, who has been trying to make the match for six weeks, predicted a full house.

The former plasterer tonight will be running into a wild-swinging, fast-stepping youngster whose fighting style is best described as a combination of the methods used by Furr himself and Steve Mamakos.

Buffalo May Have Trouble

It is this last item that furnishes Fearless Philbert with a ray of hope. Furr is at his best when he is being pushed, for he can stand still and shoot straight, and if he can reach the heights he obtained in knocking out Mamakos in seven rounds it promises to be a bad night for Buffalo.

Furr, who probably deserves more credit than he'll ever get as a fighter, seemingly took a terrific slide backward after being knocked out in four rounds last summer in Griffith Stadium by Henry Armstrong.

In his only fight since then, Phil had Gene Molnar, Detroit welterweight, on the verge of a knockout as early as the second round but couldn't finish him. The fight went the 10-round distance, and Philbert was tiring badly at the end.

Furr, however, says he's as good as new, and the failure of Tony Zale, middleweight champion, to dispose of Mamakos until the fourteenth round in Chicago Friday night has sent his stock booming.

Abrams Refused Fight

"Why, Mamakos almost knocked him out and he never had Steve down until after the twelfth round," Phil boasted yesterday. "I had Mamakos on the canvas half a dozen times before I finished him, and I'm supposed to be 'just another welterweight.'"

Phil is getting an assignment tonight that his managers turned down for his more prominent stablemate, Georgie Abrams. Chris Dundee some weeks ago refused to let Abrams take on Buffalo, Turner said.

The colored Philadelphian who wants to make his home here boasts that he hasn't lost a fight in 13 starts in Washington. What's more, Buffalo said yesterday that Furr's nemesis, Henry Armstrong, will be at the ringside tonight cheering him on.

Armstrong, says Buffalo, is seeking to buy his contract for $1,000.

Buffalo, in his last two appearances here had little trouble pounding out decisions over Manuel Villa, of Mexico, and Francisco Montenera, of New York.

The winner of tonight's battle will get a shot at Louis Kid Cocoa next week in a fight show that will be staged as a benefit for the children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund, sponsored by The Washington Post and Radio Station WJSV.

The preliminaries, starting at 8:30 p. m., offer Buddy Thomas and Buddy Holmes in a six-round middleweight brawl; Carol Alexander and Wayman Stewart in a four-round featherweight fight and Buddy Moore versus Johnny Thomas in lightweight bout, another four-rounder. Turner today will add another six-round fight to precede the main affair, scheduled for 10 p. m.

A Funny Story Registers With Sid Hudson at Nats' Camp

Eagles Host To Orioles In Crucial Tilt

Led by loud-shirted stentorian-toned stockholder Ernie Baker, more than 300 Baltimore fans will accompany their team here tomorrow for the latest "croocial" hockey meeting between the Orioles and the Washington Eagles at Riverside Stadium.

Baker, the big fellow with the gaudy shirts who shivers the Riverside timbers with his war whoop "The Ori-o-lll-es," will join his fellow townsmen in certain sections reserved for them by the Eagles' management.

The Baltimore contingent probably will have to root extra hard tomorrow if they are to bring victory to the Orioles, for their team will be facing what appears the strongest Washington club in many weeks. With Len Burrage believed ready to resume his place in the lineup after missing one match with a broken toe and new defenseman Walter Scherer on hand, the Eagles should be fit for one of their best efforts.

Only Washington casualty at the moment is defenseman Ross Knipfel who has a left hand swollen twice its normal size, the result of a collision in Friday night's match with River Vale. Knipfel, however, expects to be able to play after treatments today and tomorrow which are expected to reduce his balloon-like paw to its natural size.

Despite an unusually large demand for tickets, Riverside announced last night that many good tickets still remain for this match. Reservations may be made through RE. 2950.

Ernie Dusek Gets Date With Boesch

Accustomed as he is to wrestling in headline roles, Ernie Dusek will drop down the ladder—just temporarily, as Promoter Joe Turner explains it—on Thursday night's show at Turner's Arena. Ernie will meet Paul Boesch, popular Californian, in a semiwindup bout on the card which finds Ray Steele, National Wrestling Association champion, risking his title against the Green Hornet, hooded grappler.

Ernie's drop is no disgrace when it is considered that even the Hornet was just a mere preliminary grappler when he showed here first a few months ago. But he came on in such speedy manner that for the last seven weeks he has been a headliner.

Ernie is still sore about that disqualification in 43 minutes handed him last week by Referee Casey Berger in his battle with the Hornet. But the Hornet claims it merely evened up for the "raw decision" he claims Berger gave him in the first meeting two weeks ago.

Leonard Joins Nats, Goes Right to Work

Knuckle-Ball Artist Gets No Chance to Rest; Gets Rush Treatment in Orlando Camp

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 23.—The stout and not so stylish owner of the American League's No. 1 knuckleball stepped off a train at the Nats' training camp this afternoon and after being shown to his hotel room placidly stretched himself out for a nap.

But it was a short-lived snooze for Dutch Leonard. Ten minutes later came a rapping at his door, and it was Trainer Mike Martin with orders for Leonard to hustle out to Tinker Field for his first 1941 workout. Within a half hour after he had detrained, the knuckler was in a uniform trying to reduce the bulge at his waistline.

Leonard is slightly bewildered at the rush-treatment he is getting in the Nats' camp, and denies Clark Griffith's charge that he was overweight last season. The Nats' owner has been insisting that the knuckleballer did not take his conditioning seriously last summer.

"He was eight to ten pounds overweight most of the time and wouldn't work it off," Griffith had complained during his recent salary battle with the big pitcher. "That's why I made him take a pay cut."

Didn't Get the Break

Confidentially, Leonard thinks Griffith is nuts in the matter of his playing weight. "Nobody can tell me I was out of shape last season," he said. "I couldn't have been. Look at my record. I pitched more innings than any man in the league except Bob Feller, and I pitched more complete games than anybody except Feller. That doesn't sound as though I was out of shape."

Leonard, who keeps careful score of his pitching appearances, declared that he pitched as fine ball last season, despite his 15 victories and 19 defeats, as he did in 1940 when he was a 20-game winner with the Nats.

"I don't care what the won and lost column shows, I know what kind of ball I was pitching. I don't want to squawk, but I didn't get a lot of breaks last year. I started right off losing a 1-0 game to Lefty Grove on opening day. I lost five games by 2-1 scores. I lost two others by 3 to 2, and another couple by 4 to 3. All told, I was licked by one run in 11 games. And they try to say I wasn't as good a pitcher last season, how about my earned run average of 3.40 per game, which was better than the 3.55 I had in 1939."

Leonard declared that at 205 pounds, he is only seven pounds over his best pitching weight. "And those seven pounds will come off easy. I kept in shape all winter refereeing basketball in Auburn, Ill. I'll be all right just as soon as I can put some callouses on my fingertips so I can throw that knuckler."

The big pitcher's afternoon workout was a solo performance. Earlier in the day, Bucky Harris had a squad of 20 in uniform at Tinker Field, 16 of them pitchers. He refused to allow the Sabbath to interrupt the workouts. "We've got to get these pitchers ready so the hitters will have something to swing at when they arrive on March 1," explained Harris.

Training Camp Notes

Natives of Orlando are rooting for two graduates of the local Clas D. Florida State League club to make good with the Nats . . . They are Bill Kennedy, a lanky lefthander who used to pitch around the Washington sandlots . . . and Joe Beck, a stocky right hander from Baltimore who was Orlando's best pitcher last season . . . Kennedy is a stylish-looking sort of southpaw who whips a fast ball and a fast curve with fair control . . . but the pets of the rookie crop continue to be big Arnold Anderson, the right hander from Springfield, and Alex Zukowski, who won 22 games at Greenville . . . Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl and Pitcher Sid Hudson were in uniform for the first time today . . . Hudson has adopted a protege . . . He brought into camp with him a lad named Bill Coleman who had been hot stuff as a semipro pitcher around Chattanooga . . . Hudson requested the Nats give the boy board, lodging and a tryout . . . Ordinarily a second-year rookie would catch it for making any such request, but Hudson, star that he is, gets special consideration in the Nats' camp.

Maryland U. Sends 7 Men To S. C. Meet

Maryland's boxing team, which finished its season last week and with a .500 record in seven matches, will make a bid for individual titles and the team crown by sending seven scrappers to the Southern Conference tourney that opens at Columbia, S. C., Friday night.

Maryland scored triumphs over South Carolina, U. S. Coast Guard Academy and North Carolina and drew with Western Maryland. The Terps lost to Virginia, Catholic U. and to Virginia Tech.

The Gobblers will be the tourney favorites, having won all their four Conference matches. Maryland and North Carolina will be the leading contenders.

Terps' Big Hopes

Maryland's main hopes will rest in Bill Holbrook, 135 pounds; Hotsy Alperstein, 145; Herb Gunther, 175, and Len Rodman, heavyweight, who scales only 188.

Judson Lincoln, 120; Charley Dorr, 127, and Cordyack, 165, will be the other Terps to make the jaunt.

Here is the record of the Maryland entrants:

Dorr—Same record as Lincoln.

Holbrook—Two wins and a loss, the defeat being called on him for an alleged foul.

Alperstein—Five wins and a draw, the deadlock coming in a 155-pound bout with Taylor, of Virginia Tech, to whom he conceded 10 pounds.

Cordyack—Fighting for first time in two years, he lost decision to Kent Belmore, of Virginia Tech, last week.

Rodman—Four victories, his last two by kayoes, and one loss.

Pan-American Games Meeting Set for Tonight

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 25.—A campaign to secure United States representatives in the new Pan American games will be planned tomorrow night when foremost athletics officials of the Nation gather in New York.

Attending the meeting will be representatives from 66 of the 104 organizations that comprise the American Olympic Association.

Presently there is no group that can arrange for the United States' entry into the Pan American games. The American Olympic Association's jurisdiction is limited only to the quadrennial Olympic games.

Includes 15 Sports

A move will be made, however, to authorize the American Olympic Association to handle the United States' participation in the Pan American games.

The Pan American games are scheduled for Buenos Aires, Argentina, in the fall of 1942. The program will embrace 15 sports.

Plans for the meeting tomorrow night call for the appointment of committees expert in each of the 15 events. The committeees would be charged with selection of United States athletes competing in the Pan American games.

Avery Brundage, Chicago, chairman of the American Olympic Association, will preside.

Colonials To Clash With Virginia Tech

George Washington University tonight opens the week's slim college basketball program by engaging Virginia Tech at Roanoke. This is the only contest of the week for the Colonials, who are riding high after their decisive defeat of Virginia. Likewise, Georgetown makes only one start during the next seven days, traveling to New York Friday to engage strong Fordham.

Other features of the week are American University's games with Western Maryland there tomorrow, and with University of Mexico here Thursday and Catholic University's invasion of Washington College.

Meantime, Maryland, having closed its regular campaign Saturday by beating Washington College to end a 21-game losing streak, will be missing the Southern Conference championships, opening Friday, for only the second time in 15 years. This is the first year the Terrapins have not qualified for the title event.

Ho! Hum! Godoy Changes His Mind

Buenos Aires, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Arturo Godoy, Chilean heavyweight contender, changed his mind again today about fighting Joe Louis at Los Angeles in April.

Last week he planned to fly to the United States in March, but today he announced that he would remain in South America indefinitely because of motion picture contracts and the possibility of a fight with Alberto Lovell, Argentine heavyweight.

Apparently Godoy intends to cash in as a challenger for a long period in Latin America, instead of risking his reputation in a third defeat by Louis for a gate at Los Angeles.

Mel Ott, Demaree Supply Circuit Blows as Giants Hold First Game

By the Associated Press

Miami, Feb. 23.—The New York Giants got down to cases today with a genuine, nine-inning intra-squad baseball game with a big crowd watching.

Six pitchers were used, but the batters shelled the short fences unmercifully and Mel Ott and Frank Demaree supplied home runs. At the end Johnny McCarthy's team was a 5-to-2 victor over the squad captained by Babe Young.

Billy Jurges looked like his old self at shortstop to the great satisfaction of Manager Bill Terry.

Tamulis Still Holdout

Philadelphia, Feb. 23 (AP).—Vito C. Tamulis, chunky left-handed hurler who has yet to wear a Phillies uniform, gave that perennial last-place National League baseball club its second headache today by confirming reports he is a holdout.

Holdout No. 1 is Third Baseman Merrill May, now considering a second contract described by President Gerry Nugent as containing "a very substantial raise."

Tamulis, contacted at his South Boston (Mass.) home, said he would not sign the contract offered him—for the second time—by the Phillies.

Herman, Erickson Sign

Herman and Erickson joined the 15 other players who left tonight with five club officials for Catalina Island, where spring training begins Wednesday. The party included General Manager Jimmy Gallagher, Traveling Secretary R. C. Lewis, Coaches Charlie Grimm and Dick Spalding and Trainer Andy Lotshaw.

A's Arrive

Anaheim, Calif., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics, 24 strong, arrived today, to begin baseball spring practice.

Most of the initial contingent was composed of pitchers and catchers. Another group of 13 more is due tomorrow.

Pilot Connie Mack said he was not greatly concerned about the weather, despite recent heavy rains and forecasts of still more showers.

"We've got to take the rain with the sunshine," he said, adding that despite the precipitation the playing field in La Palma Park was in fair condition.

Rain Hinders Bees

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 23 (AP).—Driving rain today canceled the opening Boston Bee preseason baseball practice session, and Manager Casey Stengle looked worriedly at weather reports, which indicated that tomorrow's also might be washed out.

The storm, which has been raging for the past few days, is a double handicap for the Bees. Not only is the practice being delayed, but the rain is holding up completion of work on the grounds where the team will go through the preliminary routine.

Bosox Battery on Hand

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox battery squad arrived today ready for the opening of preseason baseball drills tomorrow with all hands on deck except Johnny Peacock, who was ill of pneumonia in his North Carolina home.

Peacock's absence means that Frank Pytlak, obtained from Cleveland during the winter, must do the bulk of the catching for the next few days.

Yanks Start Today

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP).—A squad of 24 pitchers, catchers, infielders and outfielders, the largest opening-day squad which ever assembled under Manager Joe McCarthy, gathered here today to begin the New York Yankees' spring training season. Workouts start tomorrow on Miller Huggins field under the usual schedule of one workout a day, starting at 11 a. m. and continuing until the athletes are tired.

Among those missing were Charley Ruffing, right-handed mound ace, and Bill Dickey, first string catcher. Neither has signed his 1941 contract.

Tribe in Batting Drill

Fort Myers, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians got their first look at curve pitching today as eight hurlers broke the ball over the plate in a batting drill.

Most of the flingers have advanced rapidly in their conditioning and Trainer Lefty Weisman predicted the early curves would bring no sore arms.

Runs, Hits & Errors

By SHIRLEY POVICH

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 23.—The Nats' bosses would be willing to junk their present plans for Washington's 1941 infield if they could wheedle the New York Yankees into selling them Shortstop Frank Crosett..

Clark Griffith has made the Yankees a better offer for the veteran Crosetti than any other club, but as yet the Yanks refuse to sell him. General Manager Ed Barrow of the New York club has kept the possibility open, however. Crosetti may yet land with the Nats if:

1. Shortstop Phil Rizzuto, the Kansas City graduate who is destined to replace Crosetti in the Yankee lineup, wins deferment in the draft because of his plea of dependents, and

2. If Rizzuto, who hit .347 at Kansas City, proves that he is a big leaguer.

The Yankees don't want to part with Crosetti until they learn these things about Rizzuto, despite the fact that Crosetti hit barely .200 last season.

Washington would call off its current infield setup in a twinkling if it was able to land Crosetti. Present plans calling for Buddy Lewis to play third and Cecil Travis to play shortstop would be ditched. Travis would be restored to third, Crosetti would get the shortstop job, and a place would be found for the hefty-hitting Lewis in the outfield.

Why do the Nats, who need power in the batting order want Crosetti? Well, the explanation is fairly simple. Firstly, they'd like Crosetti for his defensive ability at shortstop, of which there is no question. But the urge to acquire Crosetti goes even deeper.

Clark Griffith is convinced, for example, that he knows the reason for Crosetti's batting slump. He thinks the strain of batting in the lead-off position for so many years has affected Crosetti. He'd ease the pressure on the fellow by dropping him down in the batting order. And he'd tell Crosetti to forget about choking his bat and take his normal down-on-the-end swing.

May Make Changes

Manager Bucky Harris has outlined his 1941 batting order, but admits that he may find a change necessary. As currently constituted, the Nats will go to bat in the following order: George Case leading off, Roger Cramer batting second, Ben Chapman third, Buddy Lewis fourth, Cecil Travis fifth, George Archie sixth, Jimmy Bloodworth seventh and Rick Ferrell eighth.

The positions which Harris says are not exactly fixtures are third and sixth. He says he may be tempted to switch Ben Chapman and George Archie if the latter proves the more consistent hitter, as his .322 average in the Coast League indicates he may be.

About George Archie

"I'm glad to see the Nats come up with a right-handed first baseman after all these years," writes Mr. Joseph Famiglietti, of the Park Central Apartments, Washington, D. C. "That is, any other right-handed first baseman except Zeke Bonura," he adds.

Our correspondent who is undoubtedly talking about George Archie, whom the Nats bought from Seattle, has his own theories about the value of a right-handed first baseman and they are logical enough. He writes:

"I never did know why big league teams seemed to be so partial to left-handed first basemen. For my part, they're handicapped because they wear the glove on their right hand. They can come up with balls hit to their right better than the right-handed first baseman, but the right-handed man can stop or knock down those balls that are hit down the line. And after all, those are the extra base hits. The rightfielder can always hold to a single anything hit on the ground to the first baseman's right. It's the balls hit over the bag that do most of the damage, and a first baseman who wears the glove on his left hand is that much closer to that kind of a hit."

Baltimore, the last team to defeat Seton Hall, visits the New Jersey team next Saturday.

American Polo Team Scores

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Feb. 23.—Playing without its ten-goal star, Cecil Smith, of San Antonio, Tex., a picked United States polo team defeated La Policia of Mexico, 6-5, today in the first of a series of four international contests.

Smith was confined to his hotel room with an attack of grippe but is expected to play in next Tuesday's game against Mexico's national champions, El Marte.

Robert Strawbridge, of New York, former president of the United States Polo Association who is here on a vacation, substituted for Smith.

Michael Phipps, of Palm Beach, Fla., riding a favorite pony loaned to the visitors by President Avila Camacho of Mexico, gave the United States its winning goal in the last minute of play. He carried the ball nearly the full length of the Campo Marte Field just as the bell sounded to end the sixth chukker. A few minutes before he had scored to make the count, 5-5.

Challedon's Stock Drops; Bimelech Choice in Widener

W. L. Brann's Horse May Not Start

Dull Effort in Race Last Saturday Is Disappointing To Followers

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Calif., Feb. 23.—Unimpressed by his showing in the $10,000 San Antonio Purse event, turf observers doubt Challedon will be a serious factor in next Saturday's big $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

W. L. Brann's pride of Maryland breezed through a light workout today, indicating he came through without mishap in yesterday's race in which he finished seventh behind the winner, Charles S. Howard's Mioland in a field of 11.

Some veteran horsemen even went so far as to expres beilef Challedon might be declared out of next Saturday's colorful classic, although Brann and Trainer L. C. Whitehall still clung to hope that they might be able to get their horse ready in time.

Challedon's race, his first start in nearly four months, due to a hoof injury, was a keen disappointment to many of his followers. They reasoned that if he was not able to make a better showing in yesterday's mile and a sixteenth race, he has little prospects of improving much in time for next Saturday's mile and a quarter grind.

Jockey Georgie Woolf said Challedon was not a serious contender in the race at any time.

At the track today, it was declared likely that Challedon would be given a workout at a mile and a quarter within the next day or two as a final conditioning run.

Meantime, Mioland became the heavy favorite to capture the rich purse. The Oregon-bred 4-year-old apparently came out of yesterday's race in fine shape, and his stable probably will give him a few light workouts this week to keep him in peak condition.

D. C. Women Make Good as Izaaks

Mrs. Melville Bell Grosvenor (left), of 2901 Woodland Drive Northwest, and Mrs. C. L. Parker, of 3406 Garfield Street Northwest, display a catch that would make any Izaak Walton beam with pride—a pair of hefty sailfish. Mrs. Grosvenor's catch was the larger, weighing 32½ pounds and measuring 6-feet-4. Mrs. Parker holds up her catch. Both were taken on a fishing trip on Mrs. Parker's yacht Marla off Palm Beach, Fla.

Bill Ackerman . . . Outdoors

Mike Lerner, America's No. 1 big game fisherman, has returned to this country from a 30-day marlin expedition to Talara, Peru, for the blue marlin fishing in the Bahamas, which he never misses if it is possible to get to Bimini for it.

ACKERMAN

On this Sixth Expedition of the American Museum of Natural History Lerner definitely established the presence of sailfish below the equator and that it is at this season that the black marlin are found off the Peruvian and Chilean coasts.

Larry Richey and Floyd Akers are probably giving their rods a workout on the big amberjack on the offshore reefs below Miami today, for they left here Saturday with that particular idea in mind. Frank T. Mitchell is at Miami, and Larry Parker is figuring ways and means to get back to Palm Beach for the extraordinary sailfishing and a run of blue marlin.

The Lev-Lou has a new stock of writing paper, and Raymond evidently has taken time out to buy a new ribbon for his typewriter—for we received a letter noting the presence of those blue marlin in the area from Miami to Fort Pierce—one caught off Miami—the "Sailfish" hung to one off Palm Beach for two and a half hours before a kingfish cut the line—altogether, five on last week, but all of them lost for one reason or another. The boats are fishing them now with adequate tackle. Lev also notes that the sailfish are schooled from Jupiter to Fort Pierce, and that the fishing will be good until the immense schools of bait (spearing) break up. Capt. Dee Sanderson, on the "Fun" has averaged two sailfish a day for several weeks, and that, if you ask us—is real fishing.

The calendar says spring is still a month away, but we wonder whether that is to be depended upon for the National Capital Casting Club is holding their spring get-to-gether tomorrow evening in Harry B. Hawes' Transportation Building office. And, from Bill Briggs, once upon a time traffic manager for Eastern Air here, and probably a former fisherman, for his handling of special events for the line out of New York is keeping him too busy to get in any fishing, we receive a tiny creel—meant to be used as an ash tray, but which he suggests we use as a regular creel during the season which is close upon us, because he never saw us catch a trout that wouldn't go in it.

Good signs, that, after all, the calendar might be wrong, and that George Washington's Birthday is opening day in this section, but, we're going to wait another week or two to be safe—and use Bill's gift as it was meant to be used.

In the meantime pointing out to him the trend in this section is not to use any creel at all while fishing, for any angler who loves stream fishing knows that it is impossible to kill your fish, in these days of heavy fishing, and keep your sport, and the going worthwhile.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al

Bowie is going to have eight races each day instead of the usual seven. The Maryland Racing Commission has given its O. K. So far, Havre de Grace, which, like Bowie, hasn't and steeplechase course, is is expected to fall in with the eight-race idea. Just what Pimlico and Laurel will do is not known. The move may mean that these tracks will limit their steeplechases. According to the commission, Pimlico and Laurel will be allowed to run an extra flat race on the days when they do not have a steeplechase. As the mutual play on jumping events always is far below that of the flat races, I expect these tracks will work in more flat races to take advantage of the increased "play." However, there is plenty of sportsmanship behind both the Pimlico and Laurel tracks and I may have them wrong. But from a business standpoint I couldn't blame them for putting on a flat race instead of a steeplechase. I understand Art Brown, after spending several days in his native Vermont, came back to tell his radio audience about skating on Lake Champagne. He probably could skate just as well on a half-pint. The Winners of next week's $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and $50,000 Widener are likely to be the same two horses that won last Saturday, Mioland and Bimelech. Both are apt to improve off those races and they seem to be ready to take the big tests. Evidently there is something wrong with Challedon and that something probably is the absence of Trainer Lou Schaefer. Lou might have his faults, but one of them never was that he didn't know how how to handle Challedon. He had a good colt to start with, but it took more than breeding and luck to put Challedon at the top of the heap. I would like to see the Brann star make a comeback, but he will have to improve a lot in a week to turn the trick this Saturday.

BILL.

First Race—ETHEL BLUME appears the best suited of the group of juveniles gathered for the day's opener. She has worked well and promises to do a lot of running. FOXWORTH is a long shot possibility and demands respect. BANKER JIM will not be far out of it.

Second Race—SPANG seems well placed in this field and will be a dangerous factor with a good ride. WISE T will be in the thick of contention. ALL EVEN to take care of the show award.

Third Race—I'm going to give FADE another chance in this. I have reason to believe this one is better than generally rated. KIND GESTURE has the speed to be close and will be the one to beat. SIR WAR is not outclassed and will be right there.

Fourth Race—ALBATROSS probably is the best 2-year-old on the grounds at this time. Has done about everything asked and seems headed for another set of brackets. CURIOUS ROMAN is a strong runner and belongs with these. SMALL TIME for the show end.

Fifth race—BASHI BAZOUK hasn't made good for us, but I'm going back for another dose today. The company is right and I'm looking forward to a sparkling effort. RIFTED CLOUD and VISIGOTH have class and will battle it out if I have picked the wrong day for the top one.

Sixth race — IRISH DAY has worked well and may be a mild surprise in this field. FETTACAIRN is as good as those recent races and will be in the thick of contention. AIR BRIGADE for the show.

Seventh race—POLINA fits nicely in this company. Likes the distance and the weight appears right. I see no reason for mistakes. MIGAL FAY has speed and is dangerous. CALLING could be the third one.

Eighth race—ETRUSCAN should be a fair price in this field and has a good chance of being first to the wire. BURNING DECK and EARLY SETTLER seem best of the others.

Best bet—ALBATROSS.

War Admiral Foal Arrives at Idle Hour

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 23 (AP).—Yesterday was a lucky day for Col. E. R. Bradley, the turfman.

His Bimelech, 3-year-old champion last year, won his first 1941 outing at Hialeah and a mare, Baba Kenny, had a filly foal by War Admiral on the Idle Hour Farm.

Reds' Former Hero Of No-Hit Games Has Good Chance

By Whitney Martin
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Feb. 23.—The good field, no-hit pitcher is going to try to stick with the Major League parade again, and there are many baseball men, including Skipper Bill McKechnie, of the Reds, who think Johnny Vander Meer has a pretty good chance of doing it this time.

And we hope he does, too. He's a nice, quiet gentlemanly kid and a credit to the game; a kid who asks no favor except another chance to prove his two consecutive no-hit games in 1938 were not achieved entirely by tossing horseshoes.

When he reported at the Red camp last spring with the memory of a disappointing 1940 season he requested that he be treated as a busher. Which he turned out to be most of last year.

Last spring, with his left arm still spraying the ball around the plate like a shotgun, he took part in several regular season games before McKechnie decided it might be for the boy's own good to ship him back to the minors. The request for the demotion came from Vander Meer himself.

Under the patient guidance of Jewel Ens, Vander Meer began to show improvement at Indianapolis, and after winning six and losing four with an earned run average of 2.40, he was recalled by the Reds August 29 to help out in the stretch drive.

Ens now is a Red coach, and his presence may help Vander Meer overcome the tension which has handicapped him.

Johnny never has done things by halves. When he pitched good ball, it was great ball. When he was wild, he was very, very wild.

And when he was sick, he was really sick, and his career is dotted with hospital calls.

He apparently has no more complaints, and if he can come through, as everybody hopes, he will be a big asset to the Reds' bid for a third straight pennant.

The big three of the Reds—Derringer, Walters and Thompson—all are right-handers, and although their performance indicates the club can get along all right, a good, reliable southpaw might be right handy to have around.

Tarheels, Duke Open S. C. Tourney

Southern Event Starts Thursday With North Carolina In Top Spot

By the Associated Press

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 23.—The University of North Carolina's top-seeded White Phantoms and Duke's Blue Devils, who handed the Tarheels their only conference defeat in regular season play, will meet Thursday night at 9:20 in the first round of the Southern Conference basketball tourney.

In the other night game Virginia Military Institute and Washington and Lee will be pitted in a formal varsity athletic contest for the first time in some 35 years, tourney committeemen said. Athletic relations were broken between the two schools due to riots and disorders arising from their keen rivalry back in 1906.

The first round afternoon games will send second-seeded South Carolina against Richmond at 3 o'clock and third-seeded William and Mary against Wake Forest at 4:20.

Members of the conference basketball committee had no trouble in making North Carolina the favorite due to its season's record of 14 wins and one loss. They drew between South Carolina and William and Mary for the second spot, as each had a season record of eight wins and three losses, and South Carolina drew the No. 2 spot. That put William and Mary third and Washington and Lee, with nine wins and four losses, in the fourth rating.

No Drawings Made

The committee did not decide the order of the Friday night games at 8 and 9:20, but the bracketing show that the Duke-North Carolina winner will meet the William and Mary-Wake Forest victor, with the winner of the South Carolina-Richmond contest facing the winner of the unusual Generals-Cadets scrap.

The championship game will be played Saturday night.

It appeared almost certain a North Carolina team would be in the finals as the three entries from this State were all grouped in the upper bracket along with William and Mary.

Most talk immediately centered on "the rubber game" of the 1941 Duke-North Carolina series. At Chapel Hill George Glamack and company won by the overwhelming score of 51 to 33, but at Durham a fighting band of Blue Devils upset the Tarheels, 35 to 33. The odds will be with Glamack and company, but anything can happen in any Duke-North Carolina athletic battle.

No Formal Games

Washington and Lee's Generals and V. M. I.'s Cadets have been scrimmaging against each other in football and basketball in recent years, and members of the wrestling and track teams have competed against each other in conference tourneys, and meets, but there has been no formal scheduling of games.

Tourney committee members said this was the first time that the luck of the draw or eliminations had pitted the schools against each other in a basketball tourney.

Eddie Cameron, Duke coach and chairman of the conference basketball committee, presided at the committee session. Members of the committee here were Norman Shepard of Davidson, Bob Warren of N. C. State, and Motnk Younger of Virginia Tech. The other member, Burton Shipley of Maryland, could not attend.

After showing the form in the first round that won him the name of "the Joplin Ghost" as a youth, the veteran Smith lost his touch and soared to a pair of 77's in the final 36 holes. Mangrum was a stroke over par on each of the final two rounds.

Blozis Ready for Terp Games

G.U. Frosh's Relay Record Race Fastest in N.Y. Garden History

Mile Was Fastest Ever Run by Hoya Team; May Have Made Better Time

The 3:19.5 time with which Georgetown frosh won the mile relay race in the A. A. U. championships Saturday was not only a new meet record but also the fastest mile relay ever run by any Hoya team and the speediest ever turned in at Madison Square Garden, G. U. Coach "Hap" Hardell declared last night.

Returning home from a second successful track weekend the former schoolboy "miracle coach" said observers at New York Saturday night were of the opinion that on a fast track, such as that at the Boston Garden, the Hoya frosh might have done 3:18.

As it was, Hardell's amazing proteges beat N. Y. U. by 6 yards to easily lower the existing A. A. U. indoor record of 3:20.3, established last year by the Violets and lay claim to the best mile relay performance reported anywhere in the country this season. In defeating N. Y. U. and Fordham, which finished fourth in the finals, the frosh were beating the best two varsity relay teams in the East.

This victory, coupled with Al Blozis' successful defense of his shotput championship and the continued improvement of Earl Audet, his freshman teammate, accounted for Georgetown's second straight fine showing in big indoor meets. Last week Blozis and the Georgetown mile relaymen both broke meet records in the N. Y. A. C. games.

Next on the program for the Georgetown speedsters is Saturday's I. C. 4-A games in New York and Hardell is planning to enter more men than in any previous meet. Hoya entries will include varsity 1-mile and 2-mile relay quartets, a freshman medley relay team, and several individuals. These will include Mort Alnwick and Jack Doolan in the 60, Alnwick and Charley Williams in the 600, Ken Lyden and Jim Fish in the 1,000, Phil Carnevale in the mile, Doolan in the broad jump, Blozis in the shot, and Dave Wiley in the high jump.

Though Hardell realizes that with no pole vaulters or hurdlers and without any reasonably sure point winners except Blozis and the relay teams Georgetown cannot win the team title, he does expect his squad to show well. Doolan, the former national interscholastic dash champion, will be making his debut for Georgetown, but is not counted on to accomplish anything spectacular. In the 60 he is certain to be overshadowed by Penn State's Barney Ewell and others, and in the broad jump he will only be out for exercise since lack of facilities at Georgetown has not permitted him any practice in this event.

D. C. Stars To Shine In Terp Meet

That Capital athletes will play an important part in the University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment track meet in the Baltimore Armory Friday, March 7, was demonstrated by last Saturday night performances in two of the winter season's largest meets.

Al Blozis, the great Georgetown star who is A. A. U. and collegiate shot-put champion, is expected to return to Baltimore to defend his meet mark Saturday night in the A. A. U. meet in New York, he bettered 55 feet in the shot-put for the second consecutive time this year.

Georgetown's freshman relay team which won the A. A. U. mile championship in record-breaking time Saturday night in New York doubtless will be receptive to a race in Baltimore. Chief difficulty faced by the Maryland meet officials will be to find suitable opponents for the speedy groups.

The Catholic University quartet which won the nonconference mile in the Southern Conference meet, will be favorites in the indoor games 880-yard Mason-Dixon Conference relay competition.

Tommy Fields, Maryland's fine distance runner who won both the one and the 2-mile events in the Southern Conference meet, probably will run against Joe McCluskey, the great New York A. C. runner, in the 2-mile A. A. U. feature, as well as in the collegiate mile.

Jimmy Kehoe, Washington star who ran second to John Borican's new championship mark of 2:11.6 Saturday night in the 1,000-yard event in the A. A. U.'s, will be one of the feature runners in the Oriole 660.

Mullins Withdraws Name From B. C. Job

Gainesville, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP).—Larry (Moon) Mullins, new University of Florida assistant coach, has "withdrawn" his name from consideratoin as Boston College head coach.

Mullins went to Boston last week, but said he had written officials there he was no longer available because his present job was too pleasant to give up now.

Mullins said he received a long-distance call from Boston and that after his return here a conference with Head Gator Coach Tom Leib resulted in his decision to stay.

Friends School Returns From Petersburg Loss

The Friends School basketball team starts work today for the wind-up of its 1941 season after returning yesterday from a disheartening 43-34 loss to Petersburg (W. Va.) High School on the latter's court. The Friends five, beaten in the last two minutes of play, has won five and lost eight games this season.

the form of a slight upset for the recently crowned Silver Skates champion, for Carmelita Landry, Fitchburg, Mass., girl and the national outdoor champion, had been a premeet favorite. Miss Landry, however, shared with defending men's champion Leo Freisinger the humiliation of being shut out.

Beatrice Amann, Meriden, Conn., was second to Miss Jahn by virtue of a triumph in the ¾-mile and second places in the 440 and 880. Third was Alice Burnham, Brooklyn, the leader at the end of the first day events.

The junior boys' all-events diadem now rests on the curley locks of Walter Nafey, Gay Blades Skating Club, Brooklyn, who rolled up the impressive total of 70 points and in doing so grabbed off the 440 championship of his section.

Terry Renton Shines

Terry Renton, Tuckahoe, N. Y., took the intermediate girls' championship in one of the closest races by winning the 880 and placing second in the 440 for a total of 50 points. Tied for second with 30 points apiece were Rose Steininger, Troy, N. Y.; and Shirley Klarls, Chicago. The former was second in the 880 and third in the 440, while the latter obtained all her points through a victory in the 880 after failing to qualify for the 440 finals.

Most thrilling finish of the evening Bobby Fitzgerald, Minneapolis, sliding across the finish line on his face to figure in a rare triple deadheat with Jahn and Boy Syvertsen in the finals of the intermediate boys' mile. The officials decided that the three would be recognized as joint champions of that event and that they would skate off to determine who should receive the cup.

Al Broadhurst, Roslindale, Mass., won the 880 and was third in the 440 to win the juvenile boys' championship with the slim total of 40 points, followed by Jerry Fahrenbach, with 30, and Tommy Stanton, with 10.

Unknown Is Crowned

First national champion crowned was a comparative unknown, petite Sallie Wheeler, Lakewood Skating Club, Lakewood, Ohio, who spurted out on the bell lap to upset Gracia Rogers, Catholic Youth Organization, Cleveland Heights, Ohio, in the midget girls' 1-3-mile final.

Miss Rogers, the midget girls' national and North American outdoor champion, jumped off ahead and opened up a substantial margin over Miss Wheeler before the eventual winner hit her stride and won easily. Third was Nancy Manning, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., only other contestant in the race.

Bethesda Priest Economizes by Housing Church, School and Convent Under One Roof

NEW CHURCH—This is the Lady of Lourdes Church, school and convent recently completed at a cost under $200,000

To satisfy the needs of Our Lady of Lourdes Parish without going too heavily into debt, the Rev. Joseph A. Little, pastor, hit upon the idea of combining under one roof a large chapel, parochial school and convent for the nuns who will teach.

The building, believed unique in this country, recently was completed at a cost of less than $200,000. It is located near East-West Highway and Wisconsin Avenue, in Bethesda.

The structure—designed by A. Hamilton Wilson and built by T. Calvin Owens—is constructed so that some day it may be used entirely for a school, when the parish grows and can afford a separate church building.

Services have been held for the past month in the chapel, which seats 625 persons. The school and convent will not be occupied until the fall semester.

The old church building, a small structure fronting on East-West Highway, is still standing, but it will be used only on special occasions, Father Little said. The parish heretofore has not had a school.

Exterior of the combination church-school-convent is a modern adaptation of the Georgian classic in rose Colonial brick and buff limestone. Over the entrance are carved in flat relief the figures of Our Lady of Lourdes and St. Joseph.

Of fireproof construction, the building is insulated against sound throughout. The chapel is simply designed, with indirect lighting and high ceilings, so it may be easily adapted into an auditorium or gymnasium.

Beneath the chapel is an auditorium and stage, where school activities and church socials will be held. The school proper has eight classrooms, a library, office, reception rooms and private rooms for the superior and teachers. The classrooms are equipped for the installation of an inter-communication system.

St. Matthew's Loses, 22 to 13, To Holy Name

St. Matthew's basketball five was dropped into a tie for first place with Sacred Heart in the Gonzaga Parochial League last night as they tasted their first defeat of the campaign from the hands of the Holy Name Team, 22-13.

St. Matthew's will meet Sacred Heart for the title Thursday night in the Gonzaga gym.

Holy Name clinched third place with its victory yesterday. In other games St. Martin's nosed out St. Michael's, 18-16; St. Joseph's downed St. Aloysius, 17-8 and Immaculate defeated St. Stephen's, 21-10, their eleventh loss, Holy Comforter scored over St. James, 14-6, and St. Thomas beat Blessed Sacrament, 21-17.

Regal Bows To Ohrbachs In Tourney

A determined second half attack that could not be denied enabled the New York Ohrbachs to emerge the undisputed champions in the third annual Middle Atlantic Basketball Tournament at Heurich gymnasium last night when they defeated the Regal Clothiers in a fiercely fought game, 28-24.

The Clothiers were leading at half, 16-10, and the fans envisioned an upset, but the invaders closed in to victory in the stretch.

The Ohrbachs' scoring was well distributed while Gerald Burns was outstanding for Regal with 8 points.

Regal had qualified for the final round by turning back Delaware & Hudson in a semifinal game yesterday afternoon, 36-34, while the Ohrbachs had won handily over the Philadelphia Sphas Reserves later in the afternoon, 38-25.

President Bob McDonald of the Heurich Amateur Basketball League presented George Garber, former George Washington University captain and star of the Ohrbachs, with the championship trophy between halves of the game involving the Brewers and Sphas at Riverside Stadium last night.

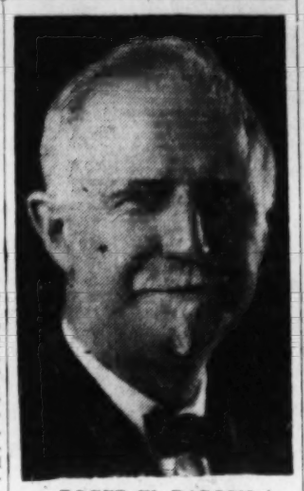
'Good Old Days'

By Roger W. Babson

Forget 1929, Advises Economist

I wish that readers of my column—and this includes some of my Republican friends—would quit writing me about "Good Old 1929." Ninety per cent of our businessmen, bankers and investors can make a better record in 1941 if they first will take a damp cloth and wipe 1929 from the blackboard of memory.



ROGER W. BABSON

Ninety per cent of our employes, too, can add to their welfare this year if they will quit hankering for the "Grand Old Times." Let us debunk the myth that the 1929 era was an economic heaven on earth, instead of just the opposite.

That bedtime story is dangerous fiction because the fake glamor of 1929 still tempts some of us to underrate the expanding possibilities of 1941 and to overdiscount its potential opportunities. It is well to be realists, and today that means to be optimists.

Suppose that some of these people who are neglecting 1941 in futile yearning for the "Good Old Days" could get their wish and wake up back in 1929. Their first feeling would be that the country had been blasted by a bombing raid. Hundreds of miles of today's sleek highways would be reduced to their original rocks or rutted mud. Every 1929 automobile—to anybody accustimed to the appearance and performance of today's models—would be a bunch of junk. Nobody of today could tolerate the ancient radios and phonographs.

In the agricultural regions, a Rip-Van Winkle who fell asleep in 1941 and awoke in 1929 would be aghast at the loss of lightweight combines and tractors for the smaller farms. He would see farm equipment stripped of its rubber tires. Stores everywhere would be bare of today's beautiful new fabrics. Manufacturers in dozens of lines would be handicapped by lack of modern plastics and plywoods. Engineers' talents would be blighted without today's alloys.

The trouble is that when we think of the "Good Old Days" we see them through a rosy mist that blurs reality. We assume that we could go back to the free-and-easy ways and the get-rich-quickness of the 20's, and still have the new inventions, the modern comforts and the other novel riches which we now enjoy. It is human nature to glamourize the past and grumble at the present. Everybody, therefore, who is falling short of his best efforts today because of a vague, nostalgic longing to be back in 1929 may well take stock of current progress.

What glory of 1929, for instance, would compensate us for erasing the network of air transport routes, grounding our planes, and thereby slowing up traffic in passengers, mails and express? The modern, compact, mechanized and insulated home makes the oldtime cumbersome residence seem like a barn. Where is the woman today who willingly would surrender 1941 heating equipment, washing machines, and refrigerators? Who wants to give up air conditioning and streamline trains? Be sensible about present conditions.

Any man or woman in business today who is gloomy and discontented because of illusions about former years is failing to face the facts. It is all too true that here and there somebody personally may not be so well off—but that is life. The country as a whole has achieved a progress that cannot be matched in all history. Population growth alone has given business concerns 9,000,000 new customers since 1929.

Electric power production has risen to all-time highs. Tallen charts are now needed to plot the fresh peaks being reared in output of petroleum, steel and machine tools. Technology was never so triumphant and we see 1929 completely dwarfed by today's advances in invention and discovery. Hence, I say that the forgetting of 1929 is the first step in the go-getting of 1941. Now is the time to "make hay."

When we become realists and admit these truths, how many people—including Republicans—would really want to go back to the conditions of a decade ago? Even statistics show that the Nation has got some worthwhile things from the increased national debt. May not our point of view be wrong and unnecessarily selfish and local, when we withhold wholehearted energy and enthusiasm today because of homesickness for a period that actually was one of the most cockeyed on record? Remember that for every adventurer who rode high and handsome in 1929 hundreds of preachers, teachers and parents were heartbroken at the epidemic of irreligion and the collapse of character.

New industries, unknown in 1900, have made jobs for 12,000,000 people, and the future outlook is even brighter. In showing my copy for this column to a famous engineer, he said, "You have omitted many new things, such as textiles made of glass, clothing made of skimmed milk, foods derived from grasses, not to mention heatless stoves and household appliances operated by radio. Cotton and other products of the farm will be used to produce paving blocks, building materials and furniture of all kinds. Messages and music will be carried by simple light waves, while luxuries now purchasable by only the rich will be enjoyed by all."

If we must look back to 1929, at least we can keep its lesson. It taught us that the need of 1941 is a modernized viewpoint that is unselfish instead of personal, and national instead of local. This applies alike to defense efforts and to normal production. Consider the huge amount of funds available for investing when businessmen suddenly get this new viewpoint! The more thoroughly this situation is analyzed the more tremendous loom the possibilities. The peaks of a dozen years ago may come to look like foothills. Those who fail to develop this new viewpoint in time will surely some day regret this attitude.

General Foods Reports Net of $15,244,077

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 23.—General Foods Corporation today reported 1940 net income of $15,244,077 after all charges. Expenses and provisions for taxes, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $2.77 a common share. This compared with $15,118,063, or $2.75 a share, in 1939.

Colby M. Chester, chairman, disclosed the company sold the largest tonnage of food in its history in 1940. Net sales last year rose to $152,924,209 from $145,615,242 in 1939, and compared with 1929 sales of $128,036,792.

Chester said sales in the final quarter of 1940 were also the largest for any quarter in the history of the company.

Consolidated Edison of New York

Consolidated Edison Co., of New York, and subsidiaries reported 1940 net income of $36,454,864, equal after preferred dividends to $2.23 a common share, compared with $36,428,119, or $2.22 a common share, in 1939.

The company's annual report disclosed an increase in operating revenues was accompanied by larger operating expenses, increased depreciation charges and higher taxes.

The report said installed generating capacity was kept well ahead of requirements. The New York area is primarily a producer of consumer goods, it added, for the manufacture of which relatively little power is used. The company said unusually large demands in connection with national defense were not anticipated.

Contract Bridge

On today's hand Mrs. V. D. P. scored 1,810 points for her side by fulfilling a doubled, small slam at hearts through no less a strategy than a grand coup. No wonder Mr. V. D. P. is the enthusiastic narrator of his wife's courage and skill.

With two losers at her slam contract, one in the trump suit, Mrs. V. D. P. realized her only hope was to try to capture the trump honor as the other trick must be conceded in any event. She called upon the ancient but difficult trump coup to obtain her ends.

Here is the way "Hubby V. D. P." as he signs himself, describes the play:

"West opened the king of diamonds, taken by the ace. The seven of hearts, deuce, jack and five fell to the second trick; and now Sooth correctly assumed that: (a) East had the king still guarded, and (b) that West had long diamonds.

"A spade trick must be lost, but the heart king may not make, and the little woman played it right. The spade was led and lost to the queen. The diamond return was ruffed low, and a club played to the queen. Another diamond was trumped, and a club played to the king, a diamond ruffed on the way back, East discarding a club.

"Next a spade was played to the ace, and a spade trumped. Now, if East has only hearts left, the hand is down; but it would have been down by any other method. Trick eleven dropped four clubs as declarer entered the dummy again with the ace. Tricks twelve and thirteen were taken by the queen and ace of hearts East underplayed with the king and four, and West followed with the ten.

"This was as risky and close a coup hand as ever I saw," concludes V. D. P. "Six hearts, doubled: 360 points; small slam bonus: 750 points; rubber, 700; total, 1,810. May the Mrs. V. D. P. never do worse."

Traveling Expenses

To obtain a deduction for traveling expenses, which form an important item in the returns of many taxpayers, certain regulations must be observed.

The taxpayer is required to attach to his return a statement showing the nature of business in which engaged, number of days away from home during the taxable year on account of business, total amount of expense incidental to meals and lodging, and total amount of "other expenses" incident to travel and claimed as a deduction.

Among the "other expenses" are tips, provided they are reasonable in amount.

Traveling expenses are deductible only when the trip is on business. They are limited to such expenses as are reasonable and necessary in the conduct of the business and directly attributable to it.

Traveling expenses incurred in connection with a journey to another city to accept or seek employment are not deductible. Suburbanites who commute daily from their homes to their places of business are not permitted to deduct the cost of transportation, it being a personal expense.

Claims for deduction for traveling expenses must be substantiated, when required by the commissioner of Internal Revenue, showing in detail the amount and nature of the expenses incurred.

COMPLETE FUNERAL by Chambers $75

Finer Funerals For Less

Chambers is the first and only funeral firm in Washington to offer the finer, more expensive funerals for less. These fair prices are low and available because Chambers serves more families in one month than the average undertaker serves in two years. Patronage of this importance naturally means greater values. Chambers always provides a complete funeral including 60 or more services. Consider the value with this casket, covered with embossed doeskin, for $75.

SUPERMAN — It's That Man Again — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

SUPERMAN, DISGUISED AS EUSTACE WATSON, LEARNS THAT HIS FINAL PROSPECT WON'T GIVE HIM AN ORDER BECAUSE HE BELIEVES THERE'S NO EXCITEMENT LEFT FOR HIM AND IS RETIRING FROM BUSINESS. AND UNKNOWN TO THE MAN OF STEEL, GEORGE BIGS' HIRELINGS HAVE CAPTURED LOIS AND THE REAL EUSTACE WATSON!
GOOD BYE, EUSTACE. — I'M AFRAID THERE ISN'T ANY HOPE!
—AND JUST WHEN EVERYTHING WAS BEGINNING TO LOOK ROSY!
BUT WHEN HE IS ALONE, THE PSEUDO-WATSON UNDERGOES AN AMAZING TRANSFORMATION. OFF COME HIS OUTER GARMENTS, REVEALING THE MIGHTY MAN OF TOMORROW...
SO HENDRICKS THINKS THERE ISN'T A THRILL LEFT IN THE WORLD FOR HIM TO EXPERIENCE, EH? MAYBE I CAN POINT OUT HIS ERROR!
WHO-?? WHAT DO YOU WANT?
MY NAME IS SUPERMAN, AND MY HOBBY IS MAKING DAY-DREAMS COME TRUE. A SHORT WHILE AGO I OVERHEARD YOU SAY THERE IS NO MORE EXCITEMENT LEFT FOR YOU. THAT'S WHY I'M HERE!

LOOK, LOUISE, DO YOU THINK THIS MR. DYMOPOLUS WOULD BE INTERESTED IN A CONTRACT AS A PRODUCER?
I'M AFRAID NOT, MR. GOLDIN! HE'S TURNED DOWN OTHER PICTURE OFFERS, BUT HE PLANS ON DOING A STAGE PRODUCTION!
I DON'T CARE ABOUT THE EXPENSE! I WANT HIM! HE HAS GREAT IDEAS! HE'S DIFFERENT!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

JANE ARDEN — Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. — Time Well Spent — BY MONTE BARRETT AND RUSSELL ROSS

A NICE FISHING TRIP—BUT I'M AFRAID WE DIDN'T LEARN MUCH!
I THINK WE DID—PEDRO CALLS HIMSELF A FISHERMAN BUT IT'S BEEN A LONG TIME SINCE THAT SCHOONER'S HAULED IN A NET.
I AGREE—A FISHING BOAT SHOULD SMELL OF FISH—BUT THAT ONE DIDN'T—
PEDRO HAS A REGULAR CREW—THAT SCHOONER IS USED EVERY DAY FOR SOMETHING—THAT WAREHOUSE AT THE WHARF BELONGS TO STEIN—I'D LIKE TO KNOW WHAT'S IN IT?
YOU'RE LATE, PEDRO—HAVE THOSE AMERICANS SPENT ALL THIS TIME FISHING?
SI SENOR—AND TIME WELL SPENT—THE GRINGOES THINK PEDRO IS JUST A POOR FISHERMAN—
NOW THEY WILL NOT WATCH HIS SCHOONER!

Listen!

This is to call your attention again to the fact that the "Gay Nineties Revue," rollicking revival of the music and memories of the mauve decade is to be heard over WJSV at 8:30 tonight.

Starring Joe Howard, the old minstrel man who composed such perennial ditties as "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," "Hello, My Baby," and "What's the Use of Dreaming"—he's only 74—and Beatrice Kay, who has a way of singing such tearful tunes as "Just a Bird in a Gilded Cage" and "At the Cost of a Woman's Heart" pretty terrifically, it's to be heard from now on at the same time.

A feature of the program tonight will be Miss Kay's singing of "I Don't Care," the song made famous by Eva Tanguay in the aforementioned time. And, guess who's going to be listening to it out in Hollywood? Our trustworthy scouts report that it will be no one less than Miss Tanguay herself—among others, of course. Miss Tanguay is a Beatrice Kay fan and has written in to say that she'll be listening.

Another new musical program also makes its debut over WJSV and the Columbia network today. To be heard Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 11 a. m., it's to be called "Treat-Time" and stars Buddy Clark, the soloist with Wayne King's Orchestra on C. B. S., and Johnny Duffy, 23-year-old organ-piano virtuoso. Frank Kettering and his orchestra provide melodic background.

The Post Radio Highlights

1:30 p. m., WOL—Helen Holden, Washington's version of Kitty Foyle, takes her adventures to an enlarged Mutual audience, at a new time. Nancy Ordway continues in the title role, heading an all-Washington cast, in the adventures of a Government Girl.

7:30, WRC—Maybe Beatrice Fairfax, advice-to-the-lovelorn expert, can do something about that scandalous romance between Artie Shaw and Gracie when she visits the Burns and Allen program.

8, WRC—The Telephone Hour offers: Home on the Range, and Grieg's "A Dream," by James Melton; the Bach-Gounod Ave Maria, by Francia White; Salut D'Amour, Massenet's Fete Boheme, Go Down Moses, and Brindisi, from Traviata.

8:30, WJSV—Beatrice Kay's rollicking rendition of "I Don't Care," has become almost as well-known as Eva Tanguay's version. She sings it again tonight, by request.

9, WJSV—Fibber McGee and Molly desert their own hour to star in Cecil B. DeMille's Radio Theater presentation of "The Whole Town's Talking."

10:30, WINX—The Post's high priest of swing, Bill Gottlieb, gets in the groove again in his regular program, featuring the latest recordings.

1 a. m. (Tuesday), WINX—A thumbnail review of Alexander Woollcott and "The Man Who Came to Dinner," opening tonight at the National.

DGS Growth Hailed by1,200 At Celebration

More than 1,200 persons last night crowded the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel at a dinner gathering celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the District Grocery Stores, Inc.

The retailers-cooperative organization also officially celebrated the opening of its new warehouse at Fourth and C Streets Southwest yesterday. Approximately 5,000 persons inspected the $750,000 structure.

At the warehouse headquarters of D. G. S. and at last night's dinner Isaac Jacobson, president of the organization, and the officials working with him were honored for their efforts in the growth of the firm from its beginning of 17 merchants to its present membership strength of 285 store owners.

In the words of Jacobson last night, the dinner was "a real evening of thanksgiving." He expressed "deep appreciation to those who have helped make D. G. S. what it is today.

"There is a definite responsibility resting with all the members of the organization," he declared. "Any success I might personally have had is due to those who have worked with me."

Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia; Charles P. McCormick, president of the McCormick Sales Co., of Baltimore, and Louis Dennison, grocery buyer for the organization and one of its founders, spoke briefly in recognition of the 20 years of D. G. S. history.

Roger J. Whiteford, counsel for D. G. S., told the gathering that "if the man who owns his own home is a better citizen, the man who owns his own store has a better stake in his country. Thus the owners of D. G. S. have a real stake in their country."

The new warehouse he termed "a symbol of democracy in business. . . . And without the integrity of Isaac Jacobson you wouldn't have had the new warehouse tonight."

Hector Lazo, vice president of the Cooperative Food Distributors of America, discussed the threat of the dictator nations to the democracies.

In reviewing the manner in which the European dictators where trying to destroy the democratic countries, he said "in the final analysis the people of the world will choose" and urged his listeners to "proclaim proudly and vigorously that our democracy is superiour to anything these would-be world rulers have to offer—superior in every way."

While he admitted it was a "terrible responsibility—we must seize it with courage and determination, for it depends to a very large extent upon what those capable of straight thinking do and say today that will determine the course of democracy for centuries to come.

"We must, today, dare to do. We can no longer sit by and let the Hitlers, the Mussolinis and the Stalins take the initiative. Now, today, it is up to us to lift high the standards of democracy and carry them forth of into battle, determined, resolute and unafraid."

David Hornstein served as toastmaster at the dinner. He was introduced by Al Kaufman, chairman of the committee on arrangements. More than 50 guests and friends of the organization were introduced.

Entertainment and dancing followed the dinner program.

Mutilated Body Of Girl Found In Rectory Garden

Montreal, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—While worshippers streamed into St. Anthony's Church today for early mass, a priest meditating in the rectory garden found the mutilated body of an attractive young woman.

A trail of blood led from the street up to the church steps, but there was no indication how the victim, identified by her national registration card as Irene Flynn, had reached the garden.

Police believed the girl had been attacked and with her dying effort crawled from the street to the church.

Patsy Flynn, the dead girl's sister, told police that she and Irene visited several cafes last night. In one of them, she said, Irene met a man she described as a soldier in civilian clothing. Police are seeking the man. Patsy said she left the party about 1:30 a. m. but Irene remained and appeared to be having a good time.

4 Killed, 4 Hurt In W. Va. Crash

Bluefield, W. Va., Feb. 23 (AP).—Four persons were killed and four others were seriously hurt tonight when an automobile struck a guard rail about 1 mile from Bluefield on U. S. route 52.

State Trooper H. E. Martin said two of the dead had been identified as Charles Edward Buckland, 24, of Falls Mills, Va., and Fred C. Bowman, 22, of Yards, Va. The others killed, a woman about 30 and a girl about 15, were not immediately identified. Police Chief C. N. Wilson said the guard rail was projected through the car and some of the victims were mangled badly.

Lawyers' Guild Sees Threat To Civil Rights

In a statement of policy drawn up at a conference in the Shoreham Hotel, the executive board of the National Lawyers Guild yesterday rededicated itself "to the defense of our democratic institutions" and viewed "with deep concern efforts to break down" civil liberties, labor rights and social legislation.

The guild board opposed all pending legislation "seeking to prohibit strikes or compel "so-called waiting periods and compulsory mediation before strikes may be declared." Specifically denounced were the Hoffman, Vinson, Shafer, Ball and Dirksen bills.

Also attacked were proposed legislation to deport Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (C. I. O.), accused of Communist affiliation, and proceedings recently instituted against him for the second time by the Justice Department. The real purpose behind the proceedings against Bridges, the executive board declared is to "undermine the effectiveness of labor unions."

The statement of policy repudiated "the proposition that our democracy can be protected or our national defense served by the destruction of democracy itself."

Opposition was voiced to proposed legalization of wire tapping and antisabotage bills which would impair free speech and labor's rights. It urged that "all manifestation of Jim Crowism" be eliminated from the War and Navy Departments; that social legislation in the fields of unemployment, relief, health and housing be continued and extended, and that a "more democratic tax program" to finance national defense and halt "the amassing of huge war profits" be established.

Widow, Children, Former Wife Share In McAdoo Estate

An exception was a son, Francis, who asked that his father's books and papers be willed to him in lieu of a share of the estate.

The will, filed for probate yesterday, merely listed the value of the estate at more than $10,000. Beneficiaries are McAdoo's widow, Doris; his former wife, Eleanor, a daughter of Woodrow Wilson; and his children, William Gibbs, jr., Mrs. Harriet Platt, Mrs. Nona Taylor, Mrs. Sally Hinshaw and Mary Faith McAdoo.

Husband Admits Killing Man He Found in Room With Wife

By the Associated Press

Glendale, Calif., Feb. 23.—Police Capt. W. E. Hegi said today R. L. Hawkins, 27-year-old carpenter, confessed he shot and killed Clinton N. Thompson, 24, aircraft company employe, after surprising his wife, Winnie Jean, 23, and Thompson in the bedroom of the Hawkins home.

Hegi said Mrs. Hawkins told him she loved Thompson. He also quoted Hawkins as saying he and Mrs. Hawkins recently decided to separate for a month because Mrs. Hawkins "wanted to have a fling."

Hegi said Hawkins told him this story:

Hawkins, in search for work, recently took their 3-year-old son, Ronny, to San Luis Obispo, but returned last night in an attempt to effect a reconciliation with Mrs. Hawkins.

He reached his home shortly before midnight. His wife was out and a man's clothing was scattered about the house. Hawkins waited in a nearby alley.

Shortly before dawn Thompson and Mrs. Hawkins entered the house, embraced each other in the bedroom and turned out the lights.

Hawkins told Hegi he then entered the house, confronted his wife and Thompson and, in a resulting argument and fight, shot Thompson.

THE INSIDE STORY

Right after Christmas all manufacturers were having their slow season. If their machines don't hum they take a beating. And this maker was no exception. Expenses were still the same but the workers were idle.

So we made a deal with him! He needed orders! We needed shirts! And that's how this sale saw the light of day several months ago. We offered to take 4,000 shirts with the same tailoring details and same fine fabrics that we always require. He agreed! His profit was negligible but he kept his plant moving. That means a lot to manufacturers during the off season. So if anybody in your household needs shirts . . . whether it's hubby, son, brother or dad . . . you should take a look at these. They're tops in value and bottoms in price. Sizes 13½ to 17.
